WE KNEW IT ALL ALONG

WARREN CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL

9500 E. 16th Street
Indianapolis, IN 46229

1987

All alone at the top, senior Patricia Williams knows the band will perform well at a rain-drenched Homecoming.

Knowing he is the new kid on the block, Principal Kenneth Brist faces the students with a positive attitude.

Knowing it helps change from old to new

We knew it! We couldn't help from knowing it. At times it seemed that school was in a mild state of turmoil, but a stable routine appeared as the year started in hot August and continued into crisp fall.

Outsiders, as well as insiders, wondered how Warren Central would survive under the "new" leadership. Some common questions were asked. What will we do now that our admired principal of many years had retired? With classes so large, will teachers be able to maintain academic excellence? Will the football team be able to repeat its former success? With one of the largest sophomore classes crowding the halls, will students be able to get along? How many students and how much tax base money will be lost from the closing of Chrysler's Shadeland Avenue plant?

If some thought that everything was going to go downhill, they were badly mistaken. There was a new atmosphere in the school, one of anticipation. The time came quickly when it didn't seem strange to say "Principal Kenneth Brist" anymore.

We were making the transition from the old to the new. Somehow we knew we could. We knew it from the first day of school.

We knew it all along.

Keeping it new, makes news all along

The year was also a time for anniversaries. It was the Walker Career Center's 10th birthday. Recognized for vocational training throughout the Midwest, it opened in 1976 and has become known for its many fine career programs.

Yet the Career Center wasn't the only tradition celebrating an anniversary. The '87 Wigwam would be distributed in its 50th year, and editors were hoping that it would be the best book ever.The 1938 Owl announced that first edition. Through the years the Wigwam has continues to win top honors in state and national ratings although its size and format has changed radically from that first paper-backed book.

However, the year was not without its great disappointments - like the dismaying vandalism on the front of the school, conflicts among classes that resulted in the cancellation of class Homecoming floats, and the first football Semi-State loss in three years for the Warriors. Seniors even had to change tradition to graduate on a Wednesday, May 20, in Market Square Arena instead of on a Sunday at the Coliseum.

It was a year of ups and downs. Students complained about the finals schedule, and Student Council members wondered where they were going to hold the prom. As the warm days of May came, the reality became obvious. We had made it. We knew we would. We knew it all along.

Keeping students busy

From the very beginning of the school year we knew it. With all of the activities in every student's life, how could there be a boring minute?

One thing we didn't know was that Homecoming could be so wet. Perhaps the largest raindrops ever to fall at Warren soaked Homecoming week, but the Warriors still had the spirit to "Shake it Up", even if the week did end with a loss to the Cathedral Irish.

From the football field we traveled to the academic field. With a large number of new members, the Honor Society planned for an productive season. Productions also described the Drama Department which managed to put on both a successful fall play and a musical, both with different twists.

From the depths of the unknown, WEDM radio station appeared back on the air waves hosting numerous events and disc-jockeying many dances, including the successful Christmas Dance.

Second Semester started off with a bang - The Variety Show, where students showed off their talents and the audience showed off bad manners. Winter Homecoming was a pleasant break before the Sweetheart Dance, and then it was off to Spring Break and finally Senior Week. We knew we wouldn't be bored. We knew it all along.

Raindrops stop 'shakin'

As the raindrops fell, the crowd tried to keep their spirits up and their heads dry. But the rain was not the only thing that dampened the crowd's mood, as Indianapolis Cathedral defeated the team 16-7.

"Raindrops Keep Fallin' on my Head" would have been a more appropriate theme for the 1986 Homecoming. Despite all the rain, everything got started without a hitch.

Fans gathered in the stands with their rain gear hoping to see the Warriors march to victory, but they fell short to the Cathedral Irish 16-7.

In order to attract a larger crowd this year, the parade started at 6:15 p.m. from Lakeside Elementary. Just moments after the start of the parade the skies opened up and the rain came down.

Instead of a float representing each class, there was one float representing all three classes. This was the result of vandalism by the sophomores and juniors.

Rain plagued most of Homecoming week, but the theme "Shake it up Baby" helped students "shake it up" at the "Homely Coming Queen Contest," and "Puttin on the Hits." Both first-time events went over very well. Students had a good time twisting and shouting at the Homecoming Dance Saturday night.

Highlighting the evening was the crowning of Josie Burkert as Homecoming Queen with her escort Scott Denzio. The Homecoming Court princesses were Janie Herrick, Tammy Huffman, Cindy Maiden, Lisa Preston, Karen Shircliff, and Beth Stauffer, and escorts Alan Berry, Jimmy Cridlin, Albert Hiser, Scott Lorch, Craig Smith, and David Ziemba.

Several students agreed that the rain dampened the spirits of nearly everybody, while the theme tried to "Shake up" and off the blues. By Beth Toombs

Shakin rain tests spirit

Spirit, hair, clothes, makeup, everything was tested by the weather Homecoming Friday, but new activities helped bring out some smiles.

New and different ideas highlighted the '86 Homecoming week and made it a special week not easily to be forgotten. With the exciting theme 'Shake it up Baby,' how could it be boring?

Kicking off the week were the traditional dress days that included pajama, class, dress-up, toga, and black and gold days. Dress-up days proved to be popular *with a large number of students participating and looking their best.

For the first time, students got a chance to display their lipsync abilities by participating in Warren Central's version of "Puttin on the Hits," sponsored by WEDM.

Over 400 students paid $1 to see eventual winners Heather McGee and Julie Pursley as 'J.P. and McGee' lipsynced their way to victory.

"We (WEDM) had no idea we would get $390," said senior radio student Sue Schwartz.

Senior Jim Gallagher won Warren's first ever Homely Coming Queen Contest on Wednesday night. This contest had the guys dressing up as girls and the girls (their escorts) dressing up like guys.

Janie Herrick, senior, said,"The Homely Coming contest and 'Puttin on the Hits' went over really well.

On Friday, the Future Farmers of America and Quill & Scroll Honor Society sold carnations instead of the usual mums and raised $400 for journalism scholarships.

Homefest was a success, as usual, with the 5K run, fish fry, parade, and many booths in the Walker Career Center even if people did have to wade through rivers of mud for their food.

Homecoming was brought to a close at the Homecoming dance in the foyer on Saturday night. Students got their last chance to "shake it up."- By Beth Toombs

'Our Town' is classic hit

Grover Corners came to Warren in the classic production of the importance of "life" and those special times in the Webb and Gibbs families.

What do two trellises, two step ladders and two kitchen tables have in common? This is what 80 percent of the scenery was for Warren Central's production of "Our Town".

Thorton Wilder's "Our Town" is a three act play that tells basically about life in general, and about some very special moments in life. The last time it was produced at Warren Central was ten years ago. For the first time in Warren's history, a faculty member J. Ramsay Gibson, starred as the stage manager.

Taking place in Grover's Corners, New Hampshire, the first act carried the audience through an entire day with the Webb and Gibb families.

In the second act, the focus was on the love shared by George Gibb, who was played by Greg Ledford, and Emily Webb, played by Lee Perkins. After the high school commencement, the two, after a long period of courting, decide to get married.

Act Three is based on Emily's ideas of living. Telling everyone, especially her mother, that life is too short, Emily regrets that she had such a brief time to be with her family.

Senior Greg Ledford said, "I was very pleased with the production, and I'm glad we had a great attendance."

One of the charms of this American classic is that few propos are used and the actors pantomime much of the action.

The production, which was given three nights, Oct. 15,16,17, had a good audience with about 500 in attendance.

"I felt it was an exciting production and the cast really brought their talents out, and the audience really enjoyed it," said Mr. Thom Feit. - By Todd Melloh

Light shines on initiates

After the candles had been lit, the "spirts" of the Honor Society explained to the initiates the true meanings of character, leadership, honor, service, and scholarship in a candlelight ceremony.

Scholarship, leadership, honor, character, and service are all qualities that the National Honor Society looks for in its members. This year 12 seniors and 82 juniors had these qualities and were inducted to the National Honor Socicty in the Warren Performing Arts Center by sponsors Mr. Herbert Korra and Mrs. Carla Harman, filing in for Mr. Richard Reed.

Senior inductees included: Rachel Cantrell, Doug Drehobl, Sheila Duffer, Mark Enochs, Lynne Greeley, Timothy Marling, William Robinson, Cindy Simpson, Andrew Smith, Darren Snider, and Brian Summit.

The days of King Arthur and his court were brought to life at the traditional holiday dinner presented by the Madrigals.

Queen Anita Hall takes a sip of soup during her evening of royalty at the Dec. 5 Madrigal Dinner.

At the 22nd Annual Madrigal Dinner on Dec. 5 the members of the Madrigal choir and their performing guests took their audience back in time to the days of King Arthur. In those days noble men and their fair maidens would come together to eat Boar's Head and sing songs.

A change from the past where the traditional dinner had been held in the Hall of Fame, this year the event was moved to Room 98, the Studio Theatre.

The dinner was quite a success with over 130 people coming to watch this festive affair. This record-breaking audiance was entertained by the Madrigals, Windsors, and the Trebletones and the guests were catered a roast beef dinner from Laughners.

To make the dinner complete there was the crowning of the Madrigal King and Queen, which this year was Anita Hall and Greg Ledford.

Four former Madrigals and the parents of present Madrigals, Mr. and Mrs. Shrum and Mrs. and Mrs. Hogan, entertained the group.

Solos were also sung by Madrigals Heather Clark, Karie Hon, Greg Ledford, Kevin Patterson, Eric Adams, Sheila Duffer and Daisy Nauroth.

"Being Queen of the Madrigal Dinner is always going to be a special moment to look back on, and having my best friend as King made it even more enjoyable," Anita said.

King Greg said, "I was very surprised getting King of the Madrigal Dinner. The food was great and the entertainment was tops in my book. Anita was a great reigning queen."

Some of the songs enjoyed were "Here We Come A Wassailing," "We Saw Three Ships," "Carolling, Carolling," and other traditional Christmas Carols.

The combination of all these factors made the evening a very memorable one for both the audience and the performers.

What would the Christmas holidays be like without this lovely musical event?

Holly dance is success

Rainbow Club takes over Christmas Dance from Cheerleaders and has big success with record attendance

Walking down the hall to the foyer, music drifted outward and a sense of excitement filled the air. Excitement of the Christmas season was felt by all those who attended the Christmas Dance.

In past years the varsity cheerleaders sponsored the dance, but according to Ms. Cindy Taylor, "There are too many sports events scheduled this year for us(the varsity cheerleaders) to have the dance. I was quite relieved when Mrs. Ludwig and the Rainbow Club offered to sponsor it."

Music was provided by WEDM, and pictures were taken by Tower Studio.

Festive decorations included the traditional tree, a new addition of lights strung across the foyer, foil and paper snowflakes. The beautiful tree lights added sparkle to the dressy outfits of the dancers.

Junior David Sweet, activity co-ordinator of the Rainbow Club, said, "I was afraid of what people would think of the decorations. I'm just glad people liked them."

King of the dance was senior Keith Williams, and senior Tammy Huffman knew the excitement of the setting when she was announced Christmas Queen.

Members of the court also included seniors Scott Denzio, Lisa Preston; juniors Steve Battles, Kathy Anderson, Rick Bacon, and Tony Owens; sophomores Ronnie Huffman, Kim Weaver, Craig Bymaster, and Jessica Funches.

Tammy said, "At first I was surprised, ecstatic, and then sad...because I'm moving. It made me realize how many friends I have." By Shannon Stone

'Involved' fans add show 'spice'

Variety Show added spice and almost got too hot to handle with over 700 in attendance.

The 1987 Variety Show was one for new beginnings and perhaps a threatened ending. This year was the first time prizes were awarded to the winners, and as a result of crowd disruptions, the threat was made that it could be the show's last year.

"The students in charge decided to try it, to give the Variety Show a new flavor," said Variety Show director Tom Feit, of the prizes.

The acts ranged from clog dancing to hard rock bands. Five individual categories were included in the competition.

First place winners included Craig McCormick in specialty acts, The Controllettes in dance, and Anita Hall in vocal music. The group Obsession came in first in the band competition, and the winner in comedy was Andy Lynch.

The new flavor was not planned to include so much spice though. Throughout the evening crowd participation ranged from support to ugliness.

Over 700 people, twice the usual number, showed up to watch the many talents and cheer on their favorite acts.

Principal Kenneth Brist said, " We were not prepared for the number of people who were there, and we were short on teacher supervision."

He cautioned that unless some changes are made to prevent the same behavior from happening again, there will not be another Variety Show.

"Overall, most students obeyed the rules, although a few cussed and were rude," said Director of the Performing Arts Center, Craig Thompson. By Bernedette Miller

Shrinking in size, senior Greg Ledford entertains with a comedy routine.

Judges have a difficult time chosing the winners with so many good acts.

Homecoming in February?

Be-bopping, sock-hopping Winter Homecoming helped chase the Winter blues away, even with a loss to Perry Meridian.

Homecoming. That time of year when the student body gathers together, shows their spirit, and perhaps even celebrates the football victory. But, wait a minute. It's February! No, the school has not forgotten the month. We all knew that this year would be different. Winter Homecoming proved that.

Proving that the week of Feb. 2-6 would not be as monotonous as most of the long second semester, Student Council members gave everyone a week to "chain" together with their fellow classmates. Throughout the week, paper chain links were sold and joined around the cafeteria in one contest to determine the class with the most class. The seniors ran rings around the cafeteria and won the contest. Not giving up, the juniors wrapped up the sheet decorating contest.

One of the popular events was the best legs contest. When Mr. Legs, Senior Joe Guyer, was asked how he felt about winning, he jokingly said, "If you got it, flaunt it!"

Dress-up days gave everyone a further chance to show their spirit. Included in this was the "make a teacher wear Charlie Corpuscle" contest. The fortunate winner was Mr. Copper who wore the outfit during Thurs. and Fri.'s lunch hours.

On Fri., lunch hours were also entertained by 50's music that was played in the cafeteria. Dressed in their 50's attire, everyone kept up their spirits, awaiting the night's events.

Unfortunately, the boys' basketball team lost to Perry Meridian, but students still be-bopped to the 50's beat at the sock hop. "It was a great diversion from the usual post-game," said junior Kim Kerkhoff.

Hopping, bopping, and showing their spirit were just a few results of this year's new idea, Winter Homecoming. Senior Todd Wellman summed it up.

"With everyone struck by winter blues, it gave everybody renewed school spirit and the spark to end the semester with a bang!"

'Carousel' happy, teary

Repeat performance of "Carousel" still popular with Performing Arts Center audience.

As in the past, this year's musical "Carousel" brought back many tears to the audience as it did when it was first performed at Warren in 1971.

Written by Rodgers and Hammerstein, the musical was quite different from last year's "No, No Nannette" which was set in the roaring twenties and was known for its intensive tap dancing.

"Carousel" was chosen for its beautiful lyrical music, such as "You'll Never Walk Alone " the main tear jerker of the show.

Set in 1873-1888 on the New England coast, "Carousel" tells about a young factory girl, Julie Jordan, played by senior Sheila Duffer. One day she meets the brash carousel barker, Billy Bigelow, played by senior Kevin Patterson.

Julie Jordan then finds herself unemployed and captivated by the dashing barker. He, in turn, becomes enchanted with her extreme trust in him.

But the honeymoon for this couple doesn't last long before marriage brings a soon-to-be-born baby. Billy, out of work, searches to provide for his new family in any way he can. The result of his quest ends in tragedy and almost murder.

Death brings Billy a hope he had lost in life. With the help of some "heavenly friends," he finally leaves Julie and his daughter, Louise, played by junior Sunny Oberting.

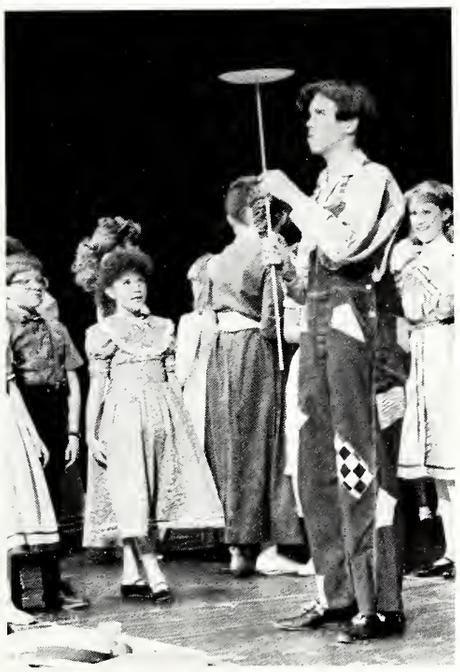
High costs push sales

Even though mistakes were made during performances, cast members covered the mistakes well. As ticket sales were pushed by cast members, "Carousel" risked being the last musical for Warren Central.



Amusing the carnival crowd with his juggling antics is senior Brian Hartman.

With the past history of some Warren musicals such as "No, No Nannette" which had high production costs, but low ticket sales, the cast and crew for "Carousel" were told to push ticket sales or "Carousel" could end up being the last musical presented for awhile.

Opening on March 19 and continuing through March 21, "Carousel" required many long evening and weekend practices for the cast, crew and directors, which paid off with good attendance.

Senior Kevin Patterson played Billy Bigelow, the brash barker for Mrs. Mullin's (senior Amy Pangburn) carousel. He falls in love with a young factory girl, Julie Jordan, (senior Sheila Duffer).

Singing and dancing the role of Carrie Pipperidge, Julie's best friend, was senior Heather McGee. Greg Ledford, also a senior, portrayed Enoch Snow, Carrie's fianceé and the sardine factory dreamer.

Senior Anita Hall was Nettie Fowler, Julie's aunt, and sang the main tearjerker of the show "You'll Never Walk Alone." Jigger Craigin, the woman-chasing, and all-round bad sailor who is partly responsible for the tragedy which happens to Billy, was played by senior Ted Green.

One of the scariest and funniest happenings in "Carousel" was when Anita Hall, on the second night, got her lines to the song "June Is Busting Out All Over" switched around, and, because of this, she had to make up some verses. She even ended up dancing with the wrong men!

"I'm just glad the I covered it up well and that nobody could really tell I made some pretty big goofs. I'm really glad the guys went along with me and pretended they knew what they were doing," said senior Anita Hall.

Directing included Thom Feit as acting director, J. Ramsey Gibson as set designer and technical director, Ken Lewis as orchestra director, Kelly Butler as choregrapher, and Phillip Dunn as choral director.- By Heather Clark

Festival lacks people not fun

The small crowd at the Pan Am festival did not fulfill hopeful expectations, but the musical performances, foods and dancers lifted spirits for the coming games.

Brightly colored posters, streamers, piñatas, and tissue paper flowers lined the walls and ceilings of the Warren Central cafeteria, foyer, and front hall. Distinctive Mexican music could be heard and the aroma of Mexican and Italian food could be smelled.

A Mexican festival you might say. Actually, it was the Warren Pan Am Festival that was organized to get people involved and interested in the 1987 Pan American Games to be held Aug.7-23 in Indianapolis.

Several events highlighted the festival on April 11. There was a bake-off, poster and piñata contests, a fashion show by Paul Harris, an aerobic demonstration, bands, choirs, dancers, and several other things.

Winners in the piñata contest were Stephanie Irwin, Neil Bagadiong, and Christy Billermann. Winners in the poster contest were Scott Smith, Steve Scruggs, and Nichole George.

Booths lined the hall by the main office, and a few were in the cafeteria. Some of the items sold were gourmet suckers, hard candy, Pan Am t-shirts, buttons, soccer balls, sun v[illegible]ors, and other Pan Am items relating to cultural aspects of participating areas by clubs.

The elementary and junior high students also participated by making murals and having art displays for each individual elementary school in the halls.

Fourth grader Brianne Williams said she liked the Mexican dancers, their colorful costumes, and the choir groups the best.

Salvadori Escallopine, Pepe's, and the Royal Bakery provided food samples for those attending the festival.

Amigo, the official mascot of the Games made a guest appearance around lunch time to promote the Pan Am Games.

According to Spanish teacher Mrs. Beth Wolff, the choirs drew the most people because the parents came.

Miss Alice Pullin, foreign language chairman, was in charge of the event and felt that the program was quite successful.

"We were unhappy with the turn - out; we had hoped for more," Mrs. Wolff said. "Most of the people who came were the parents of kids who had something in the festival." The feeling of those in the foreign language department was that it didn't reach as many as hoped. By Beth Toombs

An aerobic demonstration encouraged fitness to prepare for the Games.

Spanish dancing added to the festivities of the festival.

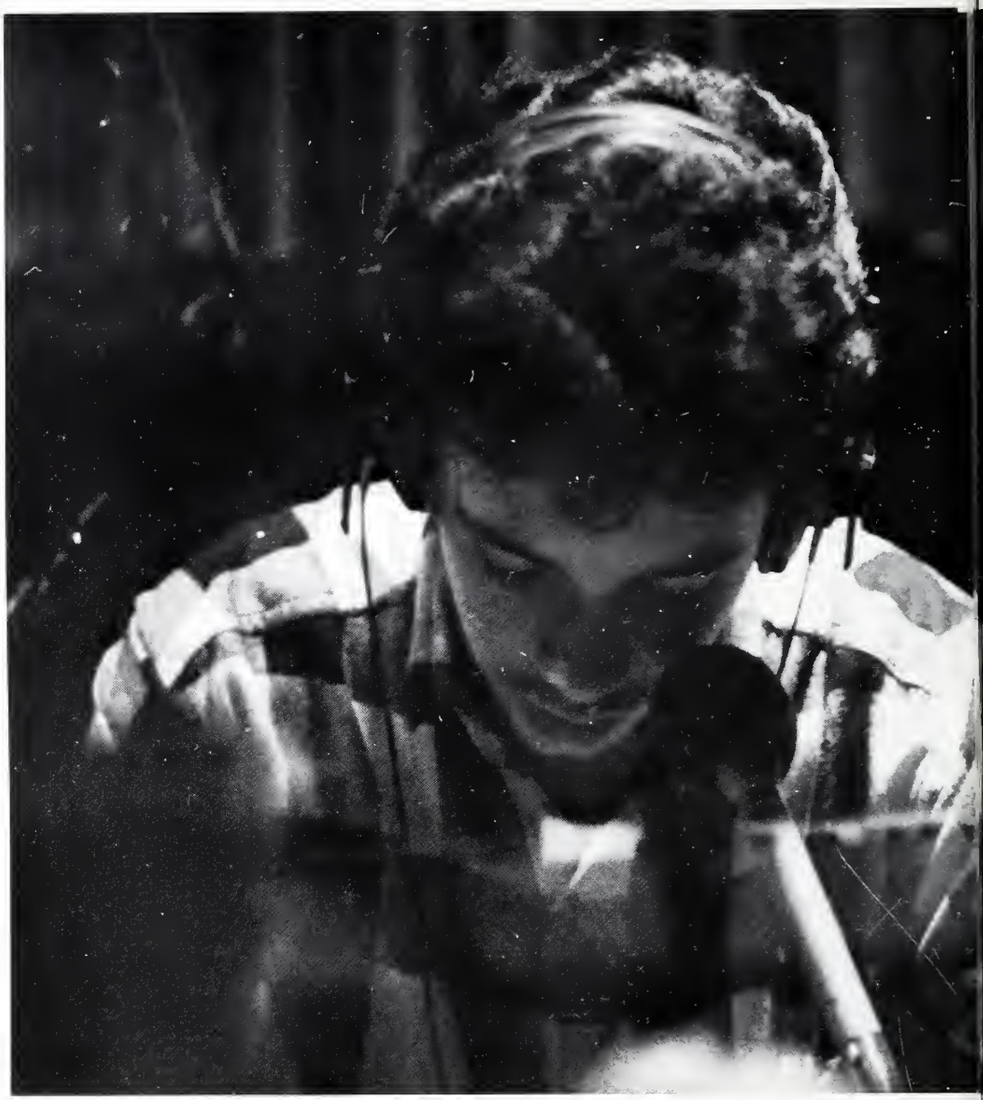
At just one of the many booths, Pan Am t-shirts and soccer balls were sold.

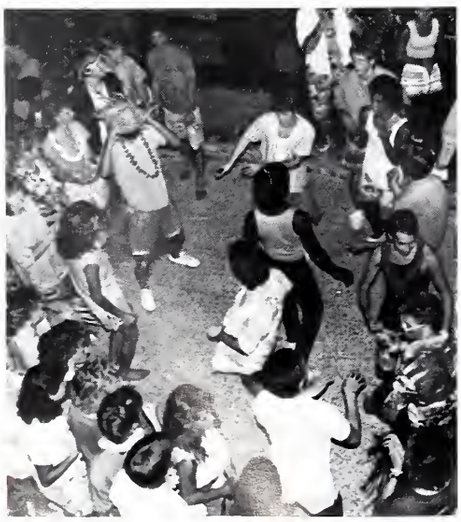
Spanish teacher, Beth Wolff and others watch as a student tries to break a piñata.

Drawing the biggest crowds were the choirs including the Madrigals.

The 24-hour marathon proved to be a success. Here senior David Norris reads the news during an air show.

Finding the important news is a tedious job, but seniors Julie Pursley and Heather McGee find it easier working as a pair.



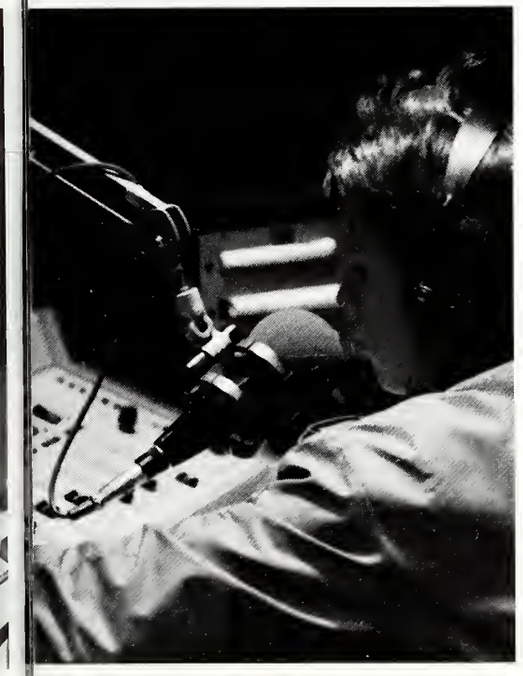


The Beach Bash was just one of the smash activities that WEDM hosted. Over 200 people showed at the Bash.

The radio staff did not have all fun and games. Much work went into projects that station manager Brian Smith had to grade.

WEDM rocks on FM dial

WEDM staff made waves all year as they hosted dances, collected canned foods, and gave away $100 for Spring Break.



Behind the scenes work is just as important as being on the air. Senior Alan Moses learned to the importance of both.

Something different was definitely going on. Sure, of course, new things are bound to happen every year. It's just a fact of life that everything must change. However, something peculiar was happening at Warren's radio station. WEDM had come back to the air waves in August, and the staff members just knew that this was going to be a very special year.

Rocking the new year off, WEDM said "good-bye" to the summer and "hello" to the fall with a Beach Bash. Tickets were sold for three days prior to the dance, and things did not look so hot. Yet, Hot Hits 91.1FM, WEDM went ahead with the Beach Bash and more than 200 people showed up. Some even paid to get in at the last hour of the dance.

Rolling right into Homecoming festivities, the WEDM'ers hosted a "Puttin' on the Hits" during the festive week. This was the first time that any radio staff had attempted to have a lip-sync contest. The attendance drew a $390 profit with the attitude of the staff displayed on their new sweatshirts and bumper stickers, "WEDM, 91.1FM, Warren's One and Only".

As continuous hits kept making the year great, the radio staff co-sponsored the Warren Township canned food drive. All cans were donated to local church pantries. The drive was a success as the staffers remained on the air for 24 hours. The tired eyes of staffers gave Thanksgiving to the needy families of this community.

Yet, WEDM did not just fade out over Christmas Break. The staff came back the next semester, and the new morning show, Breakfast Club, could be heard in the cafeteria and in some hallways during the pre-class hour.

The staff turned the tables back to the students by giving away $100 for some lucky someone's Spring Break during its Party on the Patio. That lucky someone turned out to be senior Ted Green.

So something new was going on at WEDM. They helped raised school spirit and had a good time doing it. The year was hot after the school hours, and the staff continually proved to be "Warren's One and Only...WEDM". -by Dawn Apple

We knew it all along ...

We go to school to learn, right? For twelve long years we struggle, toil, and complain about homework, classes, teachers and school in general. But behind all the complaints, we know that without a high school diploma and a good education there is little hope for a good job or a good life.

We complain about the required classes - English, U.S. history and government, math, science, physical education. Why do we "have" to take them? But we know all along. We know that they are the basis for all the other learning we will need to do.

We appreciate the electives because they provide us with the individual choices that help us be unique and foster our personal skills and talents in many areas. Some of us sing, some sew, some weld or compute, some write or draw, but we are grateful for the choice to be and do what we like.

We hassle our teahers, argue with our administrators, but all along we know that these years will make the difference - the difference between ignorance and knowledge, the difference between failure and success.

Academics p.33

Knowing it all!

We learn it every year...

Although many things are new this year at Warren, several things remain the same. There are several traditions that have been passed down from year to year, from class to class. Traditions play a major role in the building of a strong academic program. "If it weren't for traditions, we could change anything," said teacher Steve Comiskey.

A tradition that has lasted however is the reseach paper. Ms. Linda Jimison said that the paper allows her students to discriminate between fact and fiction and then go on to write about it. The paper's reason for lasting as long as it has, becoming a tradition, is that it fulfills a need for research that is basic to the process of education, according to Ms. Jimison.

Although tradition provides the basis for some courses, this is not so for others. The Great Books course is said to be one of the most interesting college-bound classes a student can take, although the class itself is never the same.

According to Mr. Comiskey, "We teach the class to the needs of today's students. When the needs change, so does the class."

And speaking of class tradition, who could forget the parts of speech that students study every year? They have been drilled into student's heads since first grade, yet many still cannot identify an adjective or a verb.

Other traditions not everyone thinks about are those such as studying the same vocabulary words every year or the weekly spelling tests that make students hate Fridays.

We learn it every year...

Another so-called tradition is the fact that to pass gym class, a student must complete a six-week course in swimming, which is not too exciting for girls' hairdos. But students soon learn that to cope with all the requirements and enjoy choosing a large variety of elective courses.

To graduate from high school, a student must have four credits in science. It is traditional to take the introductory course in biology or physical science. College bound students go on to take advanced biology and chemistry, while others may take courses like Oudoor Education or Principles of Flight. A few elect to take physics and advanced chemistry. Many students dread the lab days that come weekly.

Algebra is a part of almost everyone's schedule, then geometry, and finally Algebra 3 and 4. Although only two credits are required, colleges say the more math, the better, But don't ask students what they say.

How many times do students refight the Civil War or hear about "the shot heard 'round the world? Certain events are taught over and over again, and each year in November students are again reminded of their responsibility as citizens to get involved in the election process in some way.

New programs add variety...

Aside from the usual academic traditions, different programs do occur each year. That is what makes school interesting(well, kind of). In many departments new things happened that were well received by students and staff.

As part of the unit on Gas Law, the Chemistry 3 and 4 classes launched a ballon. The students created the balloons themselves. Part of the purpose of this was to see how hot air affected the flight of balloons. The experiement ended up with a balloon landing in the football field from a launch in the front of the school.

For the first time, the Career Center dental assistants released a newsletter telling about their activities throughout the year. It included photos of all the girls in the program and healthy hints for better dental hygiene. A second newsletter came out in May.

At WEDM, Warren radio station, the juniors prepared for the staff next year while the staff this year held a canned food drive, Warren Aid 2, to help the needy in the township.

To help with the Pan American Games which will be held in Indianapolis in August, the foreign language department, in cooperation with other departments, sponsored a Pan Am festival. Along with that effort, the art department made contest posters showing different aspects of the Games.

The vocal music department's air trip to California certainly added variety to the year, with performances at Sea World and Disneyland.

New programs add variety...

In the fall the familiar sound of hammers on a roof signaled that the Building Trades class was working on another house in their addition east of Warren Woods. This activity was not a change in class content but certainly a change from normal classroom activity for most Warren students. In the spring the Home Economics department held a fair with booths displaying foods, crafts, fashions and other home economic related displays. One popular item of the fair was the student fashion show.

Signaling a major change ahead which will affect the variety of classes students may take, the school year of 1986-87 was the last year that 36 credits were required to graduate. Starting with the 1987-88 year, students will have to have 38 credits to graduate.

To further confuse students and staff, the Indiana state legislature had to decide whether or not to have the school year extended by 10 days as requested by Governor Robert Orr.

Student opinion was popularly "NO," but in an extra session lawmakers decided to compromise and added five days to the school year, leaving it up to local boards to determine when those five days would be added.

Every school year brings differences and changes, but this one seemed to have more than the usual.

The name of the game is excellence...

Academic competitions were still the trend for Indiana schools and Warren was in the middle of the fray. The Brain Game Team started off fresh with an all new team but lost to North Central 46-94 in the first round.

Team members included Captain Abby Beall, John Dodson, Steve Gwaltney, and Brian Buckner and alternates Angela Power, Nathan Fawkes, Christa Chilcote, and Sean Toth. Sponsors were Mr. Steve Landy and Mrs. Shirley Young.

"I think the team did well considering they had never been in front of the cameras before. It was a new experience," said Mrs. Young, who teaches English. She thinks the team will improve after gaining more experience.

"Our chances are very good(for next year) mainly because the enthusiasm of the group is great," she added.

Warren also took part in the newly organized Hoosier Academic Super Bowl, a state-wide contest which was largely devised by English teachers Rick Reed and Steve Comiskey.

Dr. H. Dean Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, came up with the idea for the game and to develop it organized a brainstorming committee of which Mr. Reed and Mr. Comiskey were members.

Participation of the audience is one of several features which sets the competition apart from other contests.

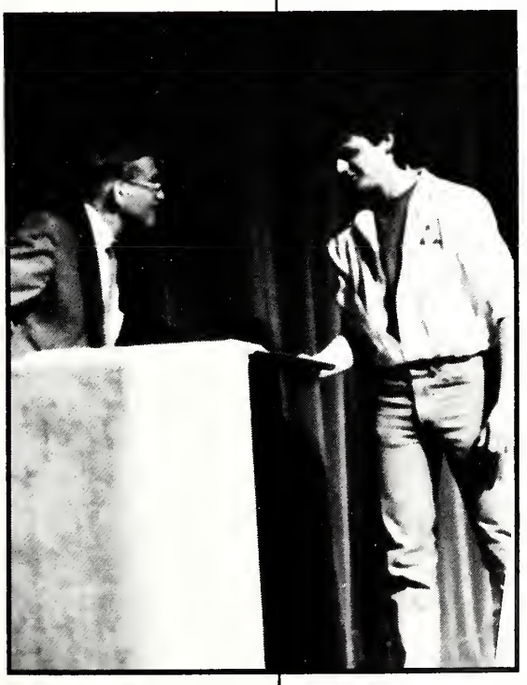
The name of the game...

The new Hoosier Academic Super Bowl has a theme game approach which was originated by Mr. Rick Reed. "The theme brings it focus and unity and makes it more of a research project and keeps it from being a Trival Pursuit game," Mr. Reed said.

In the area competition of the Superbowl, Warren placed first in English and Math and came in fourth in each of the other subject areas. Because the best scores in the state are considered and not placement in the area competitions, only Warren's English squad advanced to the State finals held May 9. Warren finished fourth from a field of 12 teams.

Warren opted not to participate in the Academic Decathlon this year, in part due to the departure of Mrs. Susan Grenda, primary sponsor for last year's Warren team.

Warren, did participate in the second annual Spell Bowl. Taking place on Oct. 16, Warren had 10 participants and took fourth place.



Other contests Warren took part in were the JETS contest, Marion County Math Day, and the AmericanChemist Scholarship Exam.

Four students from Walker C.C., junior Russ Jordan and seniors Roy Kleeman, Scott Smith and Tony Payson, competed in the Annual Indiana Machine Trades Contest at Vincennes and took a 2nd place overall for WCC in the state.

Fifty great years for the Wigwam

Fifty years ago the first Wigwam was published. Or was it? This year's issue of the Wigwam will be the fifieth edition of the book, Volume 50. But according to the official files, the first yearbook was published in 1938, making this book only the forty-ninth issue. Which is right?

It is hard to believe that the Wigwam has been around for fifty years. The Owl dates back even further to 1924 which was also the first year for Warren Central. But why don't the dates of the yearbook match up?

Possibly a year was skipped in putting the volume numbers on the books. Maybe they didn't put one on the first one. But whatever the case, the yearbooks and the academic quality and structure were definitely different then from what it is today.

Back in 1938 the Wigwam was a tiny paper - bound book with the simple title of "Warren Wigwam." The front pages listed the names and addresses of all students. A bit later a large picture of each class appeared, with all the student's names and addresses. At this time Warren had grades seven to twelve.

A scanty section about academics included only an oratorical contest story and a brief about a Butler Achievement Day. The music section had only a picture of the band. That was it. Things are quite different now.

NEW SCHOOL GOES INTO NEW BUILDING

Everybody Inspects and Comments With Enthusiasm—Pump Goes on Strike—Two Additions to Faculty

"To the right, Room 5."

"To the left, Room 10."

Those senior girls were busy indeed Monday, January 12, when students flocked into the new building for their first day there. The questions and comments and expressions of thrills, wonder and approval by the students as they toured the enormous building and inspected its arrangement and appointments were far more enthusiastic than those aroused by the first trip through the capitol. "That gymnasium reminds me of the coliseum at the Fair Grounds," was heard. Yes, it did, with all the people swarming in to a performance. But on this occasion the performance was just over. Everybody was in the audience—no one wanted to be the entertainer. There was too much to see, was the general opinion.

After due time had been allowed for inspection and exchanging of greetings, Mr. Eash assembled the entire student body in the assembly hall. He stated a few regulations and also expressed himself as being glad to be here, and hoped we were the same. He was assured of this by applause which was deafening for a few seconds. A temporary program was then announced.

The deep-well pump which had been operating properly up to that time decided to celebrate the opening of school by going on a strike, and, as there was no water in the building, there was a general rush for a drink after the eating of lunches. It seemed strange to be eating lunch at school after we have been having school in the afternoon and many eating lunch as early as 10 o'clock.

Spelling and Writing Class.

Warren School is contemplating organizing two classes, heretofore absent from our school curriculum—spelling and writing classes. It is not wrong to say that almost every student after entering high school, tends to forget how to spell even the simplest of words correctly, and how to write, at least plainly. In the lower grades, these two courses were studied the same as any other study. They were very necessary then; they are needed just the same today. One naturally forgets how to do many things, when one practices those things no longer.

In order to uphold one's own personal standards of good spelling and writing, these two classes have been under consideration. However, if they are organized, the teachers will probably select those whom the course would benefit most. But if there were others who really felt that they should be able to spell and write more accurately, they would probably be admitted. This selection, which would be made fairly, should cause no ill-feeling whatsoever among the students. They should consider it something that at least this particular part of their future welfare was so considered that these classes were formed especially, in order that they might be so benefited. Every one probably knows from experience how embarrassing it is, not knowing how to spell a word, or not writing plainly enough, thus causing serious mistakes.

The time spent in preparation for these two studies would be interesting, and certainly not overly long. However, any one

LIBRARIES COMBINED.

Make One of Largest Collections in Marion County Schools.

One of the largest school libraries of the county, the combined volumes belonging to the Shadeland and Cumberland High Schools, opened at Warren, Friday, February 27, in room 3. Under the management of Mr. Schuh and his assistants, the books have been divided into three groups and placed on separate tables, the scientific and reference books, fiction, and then a large group of miscellaneous volumes which were already catalogued by number. The library will be placed in the study hall as soon as the bookcases come, and the entire group will be classified in several different ways, probably by author, type of text, by subject and number, the method used by our public libraries.

Nearly one thousand books are cataloged, which does not include government bulletins, athletic reports and magazines, of which the National Geographic make up a large part. Paper and notebooks will be sold in room 3 for the present.

Mildred Kleine and Hilda Woempner have charge of the library for the first period; Stella Limbach, Marie L. Backemeyer, second; La Verne Miller, Ruth Woempner, third; Eleanore Amos, Leah Miller, fourth; Evelyn Tressler, Blanche Potter, fifth; Margaret Dinsmore, Dorothea Challis, sixth; Esther Waterman, Mildred Dew, Marie White, seventh; Doris Wiese and Frances Irwin, eighth; Potter, ninth.

A large variety of good books are found in this collection. New books will be purchased from time to time, and no doubt many gifts will increase the number.

As for today's book, the academic section is much longer and it involves many more things than in 1938. Of course, there are many more classes now and many more activities. For example, no one ever heard of all the computer classes back then. There was no such thing as a Science Fiction elective, Weight Training, Ceramics, or Outdoor Education. Who would have dreamed that Warren would have 2,600 students?

Back then as now, students cherished their yearbooks, but fifty years ago students probably would not have dreamed of four-color pages of Homecoming activities and hard covers with bright, bold colors or themes like "Is it Friday yet?" or "We knew it all along."

During the past 50 years the Wigwam had won many state and national prizes. It has been consistently a model book for Herff Jones Publishing Company. In fact this 50th book is being used by Herff Jones as a national sample of how desktop publishing can be used in producing a high school yearbook.

This 1987 book was sent camera ready to Herff Jones in Marceline, Missouri, using an Apple Macintosh Plus™ micro-computer, the Aldus Page Maker™ Ver. 1.2 soft ware program, and printed on a Laserwriter Plus™ printer. The book has been used by the Apple™ Computer Corporation in nationwide publicity.

The last ten years the book has been advised by Mrs. Wilma Taylor who celebrated the fiftieth year by retiring as adviser of the Wigwam and The Owl. She will return to the English classroom.

Editors of the 50th Wigwam are Dawn Apple and Sharon Daley who devoted their senior year to the production of this beautiful book.

Knowing about the score

No one knew. How could we have known that Stacie Porter would make it to the girls' golf Regionals? And who would have guessed that the football team would lose to Carmel, not once but twice. One thing no one knew was that the volleyball team would come so close to beating top-ranked Perry Meridian and that the girls' swimming and diving team would finish up with a 10-3 record and beat North Central in the process.

We all knew that the boys' basketball team would provide an exciting season, but we did not know they would give us our revenge on Carmel in such a crowd-pleasing way. We knew that the gymnastics was good, but we did not know they would be ranked second in the State behind perennial power Columbus North. How could we have known that two swimmers calling themselves "The Doug and Sam Show" would raise everyone's awareness about the boys' swimming and diving team? Who would have known that the wrestling team would be ranked in the top eight several times during the season.

BUMPING ALONG

Despite inconsistencies team finishes at .500

You might say that the volleyball team got both the long and short end of the deal as the small squad managed to finish a long season with an even record of 12-12. Communication seemed to be the initial key to success at the start of the season for the team.

One of the high points for The Lady Warriors was a near upset of the state's 7th ranked team, Perry Meridian. Warren took the first game easily, defeating the Lady Falcons by a score of 15-8. However, this Cinderella game was not to be as the stronger, more experienced team came back in straight sets, defeating the Warriors 9-15, 4-15.

The county tourney was next for the team. First up on the schedule were the Lutheran Saints. Warren had never played Lutheran before and knew nothing of them. They soon learned that the Saints were no match for them as they defeated them with ease, 15-5, 15-3.

Like a bad disease that just keeps coming back, who could be next for Warren but Perry Meridian. This time the Lady Warriors did not fare so well. Perry dealt two straight losses at Warren's expense, 5-15, 15-17.

"They were just more experienced. They were taller. If Lisa Dillman wasn't there we would have had a much better chance of beating them," said senior Stephanie Irwin. "In the first game we were too tense, we were scared. During the second game we played better. We played our game.

State tournament play was a whole other matter. The girls breezed by their first two competitors with ease, defeating Scecina and Lawrence Central each in two games straight. It was not until the sectional finals that the team encountered any problems. The opponent was Chatard, the end result not a pretty sight. Chatard abruptly halted the winning streak and ended Warren's season in two quick games, 7-15, 1-15.

All in all Coach Barb Guhl was pleased with the season. "The team has shown great improvement at times during the year as well as lapses. The record is no disgrace because many of the losses handed to them were from good teams. Real improvement comes in the mental facet of learning from a loss as well as a win." - By Dawn Dunn.

Long, Montgomery compete for top spot all year

"This year's team was one of our best teams ever," said Joe Brooks, boys' cross country coach.

The Warrior's cross country team finished the season with a 95-27 record. Their record was highlighted by an early season first place finish in the Maconaquah Invitational and first place finishes in both Sectionals and Regionals.

"We kept on improving throughout the season and when it got down to the last few meets we really pulled together and ran well," added Brooks.

The team's top runners were Ron Montgomery and Carl Long, who shared the top spot with seven first place finishes each. However, Brooks felt that everyone on the team ran well throughout almost the entire season.

Some of the other top runners on the team were Lynwood Brown, Chris Lohman, Andy Lynch, and John Schmidt, all of which are seniors. However, Coach Brooks feels that even with the loss of these experienced runners that next year's team will still have an excellent nucleus returning.

Part of that returning nucleus are sophomores Jim Bacon and Bobby Sapp. They were the team's biggest surprises and possibly the finest catch. Bacon took all-sectional honors, along with three of his teammates enroute to Warren's Sectional Championship.

However, the next week Bacon went down with a leg injury and Sapp was called on to replace him. Sapp stepped in and finished as Warren's fourth runner taking the twentieth spot, which was one of the keys to Warren winning the Regional.

Brooks summed it all up by saying, "We accomplished almost every goal we set out for at the beginning of the season. We never stopped working hard and we always gave 100 percent. I couldn't ask for a finer group of young men. We have a lot of good runners returning next season and we hope to pick up where this team left." - By Rod Garrison

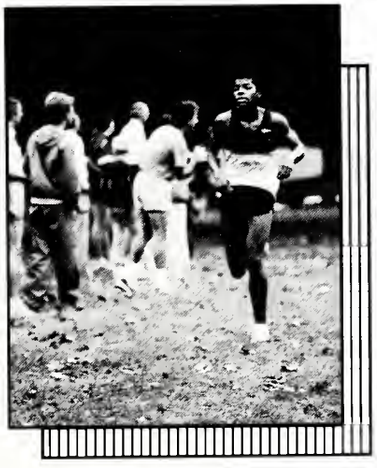
Warren runners vie for good position at the start of the meet with Howe.



All alone on the course, junior Carl Long keeps his pace. Long was instrumental in the teams' first place finishes in the Sectionals and Regionals.

PASSING THE COMPETITION

Small numbers hinder team in up, down season

The girls' cross country team's goal was to make a run for a successful winning season, although they were few in number and experience. Coach Woody Fox, in the Nov. 14 issue of the Owl said, "We have three top runners back from last year. However, underneath our top three, we lack experience, and depth."

With only eight girls on the team and a lack of experience, the season could have been compared to a roller coaster ride. "At times this season we have looked very good, probably as well as at any time last season. But sometimes we might go into our next meet and run poorly. That's what inexperience can do to you," Coach Fox said.

The girls ran to a third place finish at the County, with Lisa Stahly finishing fourth.

Awards were abundant for the 7-3 team. Brenda Ramsey was named All-County and Gail Dick was the freshmen County champ. The team then went on to place second in the Sectionals.

The team then advanced to the Regionals where the girls ran "exceptionally well" according to Coach Fox. Placing sixth out of 16 was the best they had ever done, although it was not enough to advance to State competition. "We accomplished almost everything we set out to do. We beat some people at County and Regionals, like Ben Davis, for the first time in five years," Coach Fox said. - by Keith Coleman.

COURTING YOUTH, EXPERIENCE

Seniorless team looks for experience, leadership

With a goal of gaining experience, the seniorless boys' tennis team worked season long to improve on consistency, mental toughness, strokes, and raising their scores.

"I think by playing the tough teams this year, they won't be so nervous and will be more relaxed," said Coach Mark Meier.

Considering the sophomores and juniors moving up, he added, "The longer you've played varsity, the better you play under pressure. The more you play, the better you get at playing the pressure situation."

Coach Meier hopes to improve on the team's 4-7 regular season record and said he's hoping to see "a season over 500." Individually, the players were consistent throughout the season.

Sophomore Jim Runo, the #1 singles player, said, "The whole team needs to play well, not to just have individuals playing well."

"We didn't have any one person who was the star. We just had a bunch of players doing the best they could. I was stressing more that they played their best than played to win," said Coach Meier.

At the North Central Invitational, a tourney with tough, ranked teams like North Central and Evansville Day, the Warriors came in seventh in a field of eight, but did beat Lawrence Central who they had lost to earlier in the season.

During the first round of County, the team fell to Southport 5-0. They had lost to the Cardinals earlier in the season with the #2 singles player, Bruce Stevens, sophomore, coming out the only winner.

Concerning the loss, Greg Bryant, junior, said, "Nobody played up to their standards. We could've played better. It seemed like no one could get their mind on the game."

Bob Baker, junior, said, "We started well and played them tight, but we choked." Bob was voted Honorary Captain by the team. - by Jennifer Vaughan.

CATCHING ON

J.V. gains experience, enjoys winning season

Warren Central's tradition of great football teams continued this year at both the varsity and junior varsity levels.

While the varsity enjoyed a good season despite a season-ending loss to arch rival Carmel 8-7 in the Regional finals, the J.V. posted a 6-2 record including impressive wins over North Central twice and Cathedral once.

"I thought we had a successful season. The team performed very well at times. Those players who make varsity should make a significant contribution to the team," said junior quarterback Todd Melloh.

Outstanding performances were turned in by junior Jason Wilson and sophomores Charles Wright and Chris Malone. All three saw limited action at the varsity level.

The team's two losses came at the hands of the Giants of Ben Davis and the Carmel Greyhounds, 24-16. Mental errors were sited as the main cause of the defeat. "We fumbled on the two yard line with three minutes left," defensive coach Tony Burchett said, "We lack savvy and we are error prone."

Ben Davis handed the team its first loss, 20-0. "First and goal and we got called for holding. We kicked to try for the field goal and it was good, but the referee said it wasn't good," Coach Burchett said.

Coach Burchett felt the team didn't respond to adverse conditions and needed to work on fundamentals. - by Bill Seprodi.

SLIPPING FROM THE TOP

Warriors slip in their try for a third State title

Even though they did not bring home another State championship, the football team had a successful season. They did finish at 9-3 for the season with all three losses coming to teams which finished the season in the championship game in their respective classes.

Cathedral defeated Warren 16-7 at Homecoming game. The teams' other two setbacks came at the hands of the Carmel Greyhounds 14-6 during the regular season, and 8-7 in the Regional Championship game.

"The guys really had a great season. I was really pleased with their progress throughout the year," said Coach Jerry Stauffer, who registered his 100th victory of his career this past season.

Warren's best two games of the season came against the Ben Davis. They defeated the Giants 27-21 in overtime in the regular season game. The star of the game had to be Torrence Terrell, scoring four times in the game, including a 94-yard kick-off return.

"That run took a lot out of Ben Davis, Torrence really played a great game," said Coach Stauffer. Terrell also scored on runs of 30, 6, and 10 yards.

Warren faced the Giants once again in the Sectional finals and they came out on top in just as an exciting game as the first.

Warren went on to face Carmel after that victory and they were turned back in their quest for a third consecutive championship trophy.

"I did not think a safety would win the game," said Coach Stauffer referring to the safety Carmel scored.

The future really looks promising for the team as they return most of the offensive unit. The missing link on next year's team will be Jerome Sparkman. He was an All-County selection in the backfield. Looking to take his spot will be junior Austin Young.

"I think that we'll have a very productive season next year and it could be one that ends up with another banner in the gym," said Young.

On defense Warren will be losing the whole front line, not to mention two of the defensive backfield stars. Gone will be Chris Curtis, Joe Brown, Joe Guyer, Todd Oelschlager, and Keith Williams. - by Bill Seprodi.

MAKING WAVES

Girls' come up with best dual record since '71

All of the hard strenuous morning and after school workouts seemed to pay off for this years girls' swimming and diving team at the end. By smashing last year's dual meet record of 8-5 to 10-3, they produced the best season since the team of 1971 according to Head Coach Jim Cabel. Not only did they have a fantastic dual meet record, their third place finishes in both the County and Sectional plus a second out of five teams in the Shelbyville Relays wasn't too shabby either.

During the season there were nine class records set including juniors Heather Roth in the 50 yard breaststroke, and Karie Hon in the 100 yard breaststroke, 50 yard and 100 yard butterfly and the 200 yard Individual Medley. Sophomore Lori Carlson in the 100 yard freestyle and 100 yard backstroke, freshmen Michele Liberator in the 50 yard backstroke and diver Tracy Radnovich. Junior Kim Young received the Mental Attitude Award.

Top scorer for the seniors was Stockburger; for the juniors, Hon; for the sophomores, Carlson; and for the freshmen, Radnovich.

Coach Cabel felt that the swimmers didn't have a very good sectional meet but the divers did. Both Radnovich and sophomore Karen Walker qualified for the State meet in which Randovich placed 35th and Walker 47th.

According to Coach Cabel, this year the girls had many highlights during their season, which include close victories against Ben Davis, 88-84, Perry Meridian, 88-86, and Terre Haute North, 89-83. The team also beat North Central, 99-73, for the first time in at least five years.

"I am very satisfied with the turn out of the season," said Cabel. "Overall the team had a lot of depth and I think that is what made us win meets."

"We had some very outstanding swims this year from seniors Heather Schneider, Tricia Lindsey and Sharon Stockburger, and especially juniors Kim Young and Karie Hon," Cabel said. "All in all, we had a great team and I think we will next year too. Everyone who scored in the County and Sectionals will be back next year but two people, because they are seniors." - by Karie Hon.

Junior Kim Young takes a nap during diving to rest up for the last half of the meet.

KICKING IT AROUND

Lawrence N. destroys team's state title hopes

"Some of the guys have to understand that practice is a place to improve, and it's only as hard as we make it. We're just getting back in basics, like we did in the beginning," explained senior tri-captain Brad Peter.

Finishing up with a 16-3-1 record, Head Coach Gary Roberts was pleased with his teams' performance.

"I thought we made a lot of progress. I think we were a really highly skilled team, more so than most of our opponents, just our ability to shoot, dribble, and our overall soccer skills. I thought we had a good year."

Although they came up short on their bid for the state championship, the guys' season was not at a loss.

They opened up the season with a victory in the A.R.C. Tournament and continued to roll on to their outstanding 16-3-1 record before being eliminated by Lawrence Central in the second round of Regional competition of the State tournament.

When it comes down to it, Coach Roberts pinpointed the reason for defeat.

"Our lack of strength. We just weren't in quite as good as shape we had to be."

Other highpoints on the season included the teams' victory over Indianapolis Baptist 6-1 in what Coach Roberts termed the guys' best offensive game of the year.

Defense, on the other hand, was a strength for the team. Anchored by the outstanding play of senior sweeper Jim Kenney, starting backs Brad Peter and Brad LaGue, seniors, and sophomore Ken Baxter, the opposing teams had severe trouble penetrating and scoring throughout the hard played season.

Next years' squad hopes to improve on the strength aspect of the game, and Coach Roberts likes the team's chances.

Concentration swelled and tension mounted on the green. The silence was shattered as a distant "fore!" was shouted and a ball soared through the air.

With an 8-4 season they were striking it rich by consistently scoring low. Tournament play proved well in favor of the team, as they placed third in County, fifth in Sectionals, and Stacie Porter advanced as a Regional qualifier.

During regular season play Warren, for the first time in girls' golf history, topped Carmel 209-212. Above average play was witnessed throughout the season.

"I felt, as a whole, the season was good, but I felt we could have beat some of the teams we lost to if we would have played a little more consistently," Coach Don Lukens said.

Junior Stephanie Thompson was voted Outstanding Golfer and senior Julie Reagan received the Mental Attitude Award. Coach Lukens felt these girls deserved the awards because they provided leadership for the team.

This season the team, as a whole, didn't go farther, but sophomore Stacie Porter did advance. "As a whole the team played well, sometimes a little inconsistent. I felt honored to have advanced as a Regional qualifier," Stacie said.

Next season four letter winners will be returning to the lineup. "If we could get more girls who are interested in golf we could build a strong team, but you have to have a strong base first," Coach Lukens said. - by Kris Rosenstein.

COMING ON STRONG

Wrestlers finish 15-1, send four to State tourney

Going to as high as No. Five in the State rankings while losing only one meet, that to No. One Delta, was just the kind of season every coach hopes for. It was the kind of season the wrestling squad had.

Throughout the season Coach Carmen Hurley had said that this team had a lot of potential and heart to match. "These guys have so much talent," he said, "but, in order to use your talent you still must be willing to work hard in paracice, and they were," Coach Hurley said.

Well, we all know that no one is perfect, but the Warriors came very close. The team's dual meet record was 15-1, but that's just the tip of the iceberg. They finished first in the Tipton 8-way meet, Sectionals and Regionals.

Semi-State was a disappointment for the team as they were expecting to finish higher than their fourth place finish. Senior Rich Csillag was the only first place finisher. Rich toppled New Palestine's Josh Faubion at Regionals and then again 5-3 for the Semi-State title.

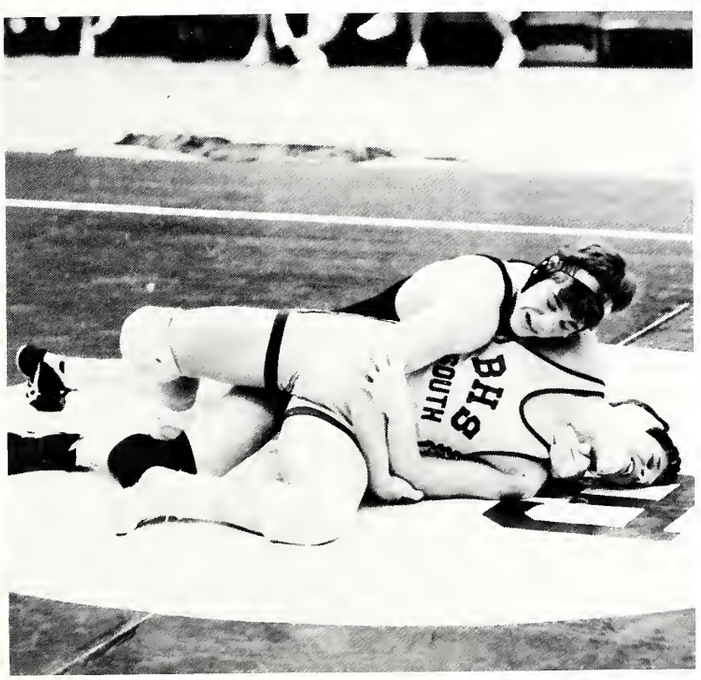
Rich said, "This was one of the better seasons I've had with the team. We finished with the second best record Warren's ever had. It was great and everything, but it was a little disappointing because I thought we'd have at least three Semi-State Champions."

Rick Bacon received second place at State by a score of 10-7. Other State qualifiers were Csillag, Brian Duncan, Mike Duff, and Rob Walke.

The top wrestlers on the squad, were seniors Mike Stuart, Rich Csillag, Steve Rowland, Rob Robinson, Bryant Sykes and juniors Mike Duff, Jim Bowman, and Brian Duncan, and sophomore Rob Walke. But if the end justifies the means then the top wrestler for the season was Rick Bacon. Rick was one of the five wrestlers to advance to State. The others were Rich Csillag, Brian Duncan, Mike Duff, and Rob Walke.

— by Rod Garrison and Jennifer Vaughn

Coach Carmen Hurley led his team to a 15-1 record and qualified five wrestlers to State.



Junior Rick Bacon, who defeated Chris Finley by 15-1, earned the MVP title by being State Runner-Up, having the best record of 38-3 and having the most individual points with 379.

State qualifier Rob Walke, sophomore, had 10 shutouts during the season.

SHOOTING FOR THE STARS

Team misses Semistate by 3; led by sophomore

It was an interesting season for the boy's basketball team. It was a season of change - a season of adversity.

In the end they had come up short on their bid for a second straight Semi-state berth; nevertheless, it turned out to be quite an accomplishing year.

For a team of any standing to lose four key starters and still come away with berths in both the County Final and the Regional Championship games is a team that did pretty darn good.

The main change of course came in the presence of Greg Graham, the sophomore, who excited the fans with his "Get me the ball, I'll ram it down their throats" mentality. He led the team in scoring and rebounding while providing some last second heroics to win big games.

With the changes came adversity for second year Head Coach Gary Jacob. The team got the label of a "rebuilding team," so what do they do? They start the season on fire.

They opened up the season with nine wins in their first 12 outings on the year. With the quick start, their "rebuilding" label was quickly dispersed.

Even with their hot start, the State polls failed to recognize the Warriors as a team to be reckoned with.

"Considering we are the only Regional team not in the polls from last year's State tournament, I think it is a little unfair by that respect that we are not in," Coach Gary Jacob said.

Then the unthinkable happened. They went on a losing streak. They lost seven of their next 10 outings heading into the State Touranment and critics said, "I told you so."

In what's known nationwide as "Hoosier Hysteria", the month of March saw the Warriors come out looking for blood.

Beech Grove and Roncolli fell by the wayside, and a Sectional triumph was at hand.

Next came Lawrence North in the opening Regional game.

The Wildcats were tamed by the Warriors who surprised the state with a sensational double overtime victory that catapulted them into the Regional finals against Pike.

In the end it was Pike who prevailed 60-57, but Coach Jacob looked at the loss and the entire season optimistically.

"I'm proud of the kids that they got this far with only one returning starter from last year's squad. And here we are, just three points shy of the Semi-State. That says a lot about our program."

SHOOTING
THEIR BEST SHOT

Varsity gives it their best shot but ends up short

Girl's basketball fell on hard times in this season. Being used to winning seasons behind the tall frame of Linda Godby, the Ladies found victories hard to come by.

The Ladies, after a first round Sectional loss to Lawrence Central, ended the season 4-15. While some people say it was a lack of talent and coaching, senior guard Lisa Sweany disagrees. "I think that it was more a lack of experience. We had only two people with a lot of experience in myself and Vanessa and we lost a lot of seniors from last year's squad so it was kind of a rebuilding year for the team."

The Warriors had a tough schedule with perennial powers such as Crown Point, Brebeuf, Rushville, and Benton Central, all four of the teams defeated the Warriors, but Warren had their share of close games where they did come out on top.

Possibly the best victory of the season was against a tough North Central squad. Warren defeated the Panthers and they played a very consistent game throughout.

"I thought it was a very good win for the team, we played real consistent and we really played like we wanted to win," said Vanessa Lampkins.

The team was a very young one featuring a lot of sophomores and juniors who hadn't competed at varsity level.

"The team in a sense had only two and a half players with experience. We had Lisa and Vanessa (Lampkins) who started all the games last year and Krista (Caldwell) who played, but not until the end of the season," said Coach Parrish.

The team does lose Vanessa, Lisa, Leslie Cox and Tiffany Singhurst, but they have a fine nucleus returning in Caldwell, Kim Dick, Stacie Porter, Keenya Warner, Brenda Ramsey, who saw a lot of action at the end of the season, and also returning is Leslie Leavell who at times showed flashes of brilliance at both ends of the court.

"She has a very promising outlook, I just think she needs to be a bit more consistent in her play," said Coach Sue Parrish.

Shooting seemed to be a problem of the Warriors all season. Coach Parrish felt it was because they were not maneuvering well therefore not getting the high percentage shots.

Overall it was a lean year for the Warriors, as far as victories go, but as far as talent goes this team for next year could become like Mt. St. Helen's was a few years ago, waiting to burst.

SPLASHING SUCCESS

Boys' swimming, diving takes Sectional title

After winning the County and finishing fifth at State last year, this year's swimming team was in for quite a shock when they came up with a fourth place finish at County and an 18th place finish at State.

These results may seem gloomy to some, but the team did finish with an 8-5 dual meet record, second place finishes at both the Carmel and Warren Invitationals, and a third place finish at the North Central Invitational.

The team's best meet, according to Coach Con Keller and seniors Andy Pflum, Guy Ruble, and Scott Wildaur, was Sectionals. The team won the meet, with everyone who swam qualifying for either the consolation or championship finals, one of the team's goals.

The medley relay, consisting of seniors Ruble, Doug Light, Sam Ladwig, and Jeff Leeke finished 11th at State, while the 400 freestyle relay of seniors Light, Pflum, Wildaur, and John Walesky finished 13th. Ruble also competed in the 100 yard backstroke and finished eighth, while Leeke swam in both the 200 yard freestyle and the 100 yard butterfly, finishing 31st in both.

"It was nice to see him (Leeke) get that success, especially after all his effort in the last four years," Coach Keller said.

This year Coach Keller established a new attendance policy for the team. The policy stated that if a swimmer missed a practice without talking to Coach Keller he would not participate in the next meet. If he missed two practices without an excuse he was off the team.

"If they came to me and told me they needed to miss, for homework or something they were excused," Coach Keller said. He explained the need for the policy "because we never had an attendance problem before. This group didn't have the maturity or desire to control themselves and come to practice."

"Starting out no one liked it. We thought Mr. Keller was being too strict. But in the end we realized his intent was to make us a team because we weren't really a team," Ruble said. Pflum agreed with the policy saying, "It got people there who normally wouldn't be there."

SPRINGING TO THE TOP

Gymnasts go 10-0, take County, Sectional titles

Despite high hopes, a Number two State-wide ranking, and the County and Sectional titles, the girls' gymnastics team as a whole did not make it to the State tournament.

For the regular season, the girls were 10-0 and 36-2-1 overall. One of the losses and the tie were at Regionals to Connersville, the eventual State champions. The other loss came at the hands of Columbus North at their invitational.

Rough breaks are not uncommon for gymnasts, and the Lady Warriors were no exception. Coach LouAnn Schwenn said she felt sure Cathy Couch, junior, had a first place coming to her in the floor exercise at State instead of the third place she received.

"In gymnastics when you put the decisions into the hands of judges who've seen 42 kids, it gets difficult to get the kids in the right places. You can blame the judges, but when they've watched so many, some girls get lost in the shuffle," she said.

The girls were especially strong at County and Sectionals. They clobbered the then Number 1 rated North Central at County with a score of 103.65 to the Panther's 98.2 to take first place. In a field of seven, the Ladies came away victorious at Sectionals, also. With a score of 104.05 to Carmel's 101.95, the team took the Greyhounds out of contention for the Sectional crown.

At County, Cathy, the Gymnast of the Year, was the All-Around champion with firsts on the beam and the floor exercise, a third on the vault, and a ninth on the bars.

Sectionals was a high point for the team. They beat longtime rival Carmel and again Cathy came away with several titles. She received firsts in the floor exercise, All-Around, and broke the record in the vault compeition. Tina Meyer, freshman, received second in the floor exercise, vault, and the All-Around.

Cathy advanced to the All-Around at State with a Regionals first in floor exercise and secondk places on the vault and the All-Around, and a fourth the beam. Tina Myer also competed in the All-Around competiton at State.

"Coach LouAnn said we weren't going to win. It just wasn't 100 percent. We were all down. We needed to psych ourselves up more. At Regionals, we were all pulling just as individuals and not as a team," Cathy said.

At State, Cathy received an 11th place finish on the vault, fourth on the beam, third on the floor exercise, and third in the All-Around. Tina, the Mental Attitude Award winner, was 19th in the All-Around, ninth on the floor exercise, and 17th on the vault. Sophomore Karen Walker, the team's MVP, placed 11th on the bars.

Next year Coach Schwenn wants the girls to be more concerned with preparedness than winning and going undefeated. "Winning will be secondary to excelling in Sectional, Regional, and State competiton," she said. By Jennifer Vaughan.

EVENING
THE SCORE

Boys' track team finishes even; 3-3 dual record

Plagued by the loss of a number of team members due to low grades and other personal problems, the boys' track team suffered from a lack of both experience and depth.

"The team could've given up with all the things that have happened this year, but we've just worked harder and improved," junior Carl Long said. Head Coach Dean Carbone agreed with Long. "We are down to the group of kids who love to run and want to work hard to improve."

Another setback to the team was spring break. "When you practice for four weeks and then there comes a nine - day stretch where you don't have to run," he paused, and said, "let's face it, most kids wouldn't. When they don't keep practicing it runins all that training."

Despite all of these problems, the team still managed to win three of their first four meets. They had wins over Arlington,Richmond, and Carmel. In the win over Carmel several runners turned in some fast times. Lynwood Brown had his fastest time in the 900 meters, while Monty Thompson did the same in the 400 meters. Keith Brubaker and Long teamed up with these two to defeat Carmel in the 1600 meter relay. Sophomore Gary O'Conner set a class record in the low hurdles.

The team did fairly well in tournament play as they finished sixth in the County. In the Sectionals the team finished sixth and advanced on to the Regionals where they qualified one individual for State.

Coach Carbone was also impressed with his team's performance in the victory over Arlington. "Because we have such a young team," Carbone said, "I was surprised that the team responded and did so well."

Kenny Leonard, Jim Bacon, Randy Stevenson, and Keith Brubaker earned first in 200 and 3200 meters, pole vault, and low hurdles respectively. The 400 meter team of Washington, Williams, Brubaker and Leonard took firsts. Rod Garrison

CLEARING THE HURDLES

Hughes, McCray finish in top five at State meet

This year's girls' track team was toted as one of the best Warren teams in a long time by team members and Head Coach Woody Fox alike. "Last year we finished second in the County and Sectional, too," Coach Fox said. "I don't see any reason why we can't do that again this season."

Whether they met all of their goals or not, they still had a good season. They finished well in the Sectionals and then went on to tie for fourth place in Regionals with Brownsburg, Noblesville, and Brebuf with 20 points. Individually senior Wilma Hughes and junior Carmilla McCray did very well at the meet held at Carmel. Wilma finished second in the 400 with a time of :57.8, while Carmilla finished fifth in the shotput with 37" 2 1/2' and first in the discus with a throw of 127" 8'. In the girls' track Regional competition the top five individuals advance to the State meet.

So next up for these two was the State meet. Wilma came away from the meet as the third fastest 400 runner in the state with a time of 58.20. Carmilla finished her season successfully too. She placed fourth in the discus event with a throw of 126" 10', just one inch behind Amy McDonald from Bloomington South.

The team as a whole had a few success stories too. The team opened up their season with an indoor defeat of Lawrence Central. "We've been running Lawrence Central for four years, and this is the first time we have defeated them," Coach Fox paused. "It felt pretty good." The final score in the meet was 41-32. Another first for the team was their victory against Carmel. Carmella McCray led the team in the shot put and the discus, while Kenya Warner and Rayna Mayes ran well in the hurdles.

The team had a good season and look forward to next season even though they will be losing two of their top members Wilma and Vanessa Lampkins to graduation. The two will be replaced by a strong core of sophomores and look forward to another good season. - by Rod Garrison and Sharon Daley.

TAKING AIM

Depth helps "big bunch of sweethearts" go 9-7

Senior leadership and a large number of sophomore members is the combination which helped this year's girls' tennis team to 9-7 record.

Lead by the returning letter winners the team Head Coach Meier calls a "big bunch of sweethearts" certainly did not endear themselves to New Palestine, Ben Davis, Howe or Lawrence Central who became victims in the team's four match winning streak. The streak came after a loss in their first match of the season against Perry Meridian 4-1 with senior No. one singles player Beth Holmes being the lone victor.

The team's leaders were returning varsity players and seniors Holmes, Lynne Greeley, and Laura Patrick. These three players offered leadership while a large corp of sophomores offered the depth the team has lacked in previous years. "Last year we had 13 girls on the team, this year we've jumped up to 20," Coach Meier said.

But neither the leadership nor depth helped the team during the County tournament. A surprising 0-5 defeat at the hands of Southport greeted the team in the first round. Southport is not generally considered a heavyweight like perennial powers Cathedral and Carmel.

The team did get further in the Sectional competition though. Going up against Beech Grove in the first round proved advantages for the team when they soundly defeated the south-side team 4-1. Next for the girls was Cathedral. Cathedral sent the team to summer vacation with an 0-5 defeat.

Although they will lose their three varsity singles players to graduation, Holmes, Patrick, and Robin Winchester, Coach Meier looks to his sophomores for help next year. Two sophomores inparticular are Natalie Frymier and Andrea Carbone, who were the No. one and two junior varsity singles players respectively. - by Sharon Daley.

SWINGING WITH STYLE

Youth advantage, not detriment for young team

For some teams having a majority of the members being sophomores would be a detriment, but not the boys' golf team. Five out of the team's eleven members were sophomores and one was a freshman. Five juniors were members, but the team had no senior members. "We have a very young team this year. The intriguing thing about this year's team is that all of our players are on the varsity level," Head Coach Gary Jacob said.

"I think we've had a good turnout this season. We've got more sophomores than last year's team, but the players are of a higher calibar," said junior Rick Norman.

Due to the high calibar of the players the team had to resort to unusual measures to split up the varsity and junior varsity rosters. "The rosters are determined by their performance in practice during the week. If a player plays well in the practices that week, he would play on the varsity team. However, if he doesn't do as well as the other players that week, he would be on the junior varsity roster," Coach Jacob said.

The team started out with two losses to Ben Davis and Greenfield Central, but bounced back by winning its next two meets with Roncalli and Perry.

One problem that the team had was a number of matches being cancelled due to rain. "We've had three reinouts so far this season," said junior Rick Norman. "I don't think that the rainouts have hurt us. It's given us more time to practice and more time for the players to get together as a team."

Although Coach Jacob hoped to "win the sectionals and advance to the regionals and then possibly go to semi-state," these goals were not accomplished. The team finished seventh in the Sectional competition, and had one member advance to Regionals, Rick Norman. - by Sharon Daley.

BATTING A THOUSAND

Inexperienced team has successful 18-9 season

After losing "a lot of power hitters and some key infielders and outfielders" this year was a rebuilding one for the baseball team according to Head Coach Don Foreman, who completed his 27th year of coaching this year.

"In a sense our team is better than it was last year, but in a different way. Last year we won a lot of games without even really having to work hard at it. This year we have had to work to win, even though we have lost more games than last year I still feel our team is better for that reason," senior first baseman Tony Mendez said.

With the loss of Chris Limbach, Jeff Massey, and Jeff George the team was lacking in many areas. Senior Scott Nelson, who was 9-0 last year, was supposed to replace Limbach in the pitching department but started out slowly due to a pulled groin muscle. Nelson had help from junior Andre Denman, who had a mid-season record of 3-1 and a 1.20 ERA (earned run average).

"This year's baseball team has some talent, but the lack of experience at the varsity level has produced inconsistent play," Coach Foreman said.

After they got off to a 3-2 start the team went on to win three out of their next four games, including two wins over Muncie South in a double-header, 4-3 and 11-2 and a convincing 17-7 rout of Lawrence Central.

When Perry beat Warren 2-3 in an eight inning game, they were not very pleased to see that they were matched up with the Falcons in the first round of the County tourney. The Warriors pulled through in a 14-1 blowout. Next was Southport, who lost to Warren 13-6, and the Warriors then faced Lawrence Central. Here they lost their bid for a County title when the Bears beat them 11-2.

In the Sectional competition Warren gained revenge on Howe for an early season defeat, 2-4, by beating the Hornets 6-5. Beech Grove sent the team home for the summer with a 5-6, 9-inning barn-burner. by Sharon Daley and Karie Hon.

TURNING A CORNER

Softball team turns out Sectional championship

Ever since winning the State championship in 1985 many people have wondered if the softball team could repeat as champions, but this year that was not to be so. The team had an excellent season by becoming the Sectional champions over Lawrence Central and amassing a 23-2 final record. The team made it to the Regional finals at Perry Meridian, but were denied a State berth by their hosts in a 4-3 heart-breaking defeat.

In the Sectionals, held at Warren Central the team had an easy time with both rounds. In the first round, the team easily beat Howe in a 6-0 decision. They then went on to become Sectional champions in a 14-0 blowout of Lawrence Central.

In the Regional finals, the team had a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning on a two-run single by senior Kim Hawley. This was not enough to hold off the Falcons as they tied the game with single runs in the first and third innings, taking the game down to the wire during the seventh inning.

The team was able to accomplish their record and Sectional championship with the help of an excellent pitching staff and a strong defense. "Our defense and our speed are our strengths. Defensively we're great," senior Janie Herrick said. The pitching staff was led by senior Rachel Cantrell. Cantrell had her best game against Perry Meridian. "When we played Perry Meridian before County we had our best game. We won 9-0. Rachel pitched her best game of the year and we hit real well. We did the best we've done and probably the best we can do," Head Coach Dave Stroud said.

During the season the team was ranked both first and second in the state. At the time of the No. two ranking Herrick felt the team deserved the No. one ranking but would "rather we were second, because then we can prove we're No. one by winning State."

Although they could not accomplish this goal, they were ranked No. 1 in the state during most of the post-season tournament play.

Next year the team will have to learn to play without the help of graduated seniors Janie Herrick, Kim Hawley, Rachel Cantrell, Lisa Sweany, and Tiffany Singhurst. - by Sharon Daley.

Coach Jerry Stauffer led his team to another Sectional championship.

Brian Duncan, Rob Walke, Rick Bacon and Rich Csillag were four of the five wrestlers who made it to State.

PITCHING A WINNER

Four teams Sectional champions, two Regional

While any victory is a triumph, the best ones usually come during County, or post-season tourneys. With talent, practice, and Warrior spirit, four teams won Sectional crowns and two teams won Regional titles

Boys' cross country won both the Sectional and Regional titles with the help of Carl Long and Ron Montgomery. The football team again won their Sectionals by beating Ben Davis 10-7, but lost their chance to win State when they fell to Carmel 7-8 in the final Regional game.

As for the winter sports, the boys' were more successful than the girls. The boys' basketball team won their Sectionals against Franklin. The boys' won their first round of Regional play, but lost in the championship round to Pike.

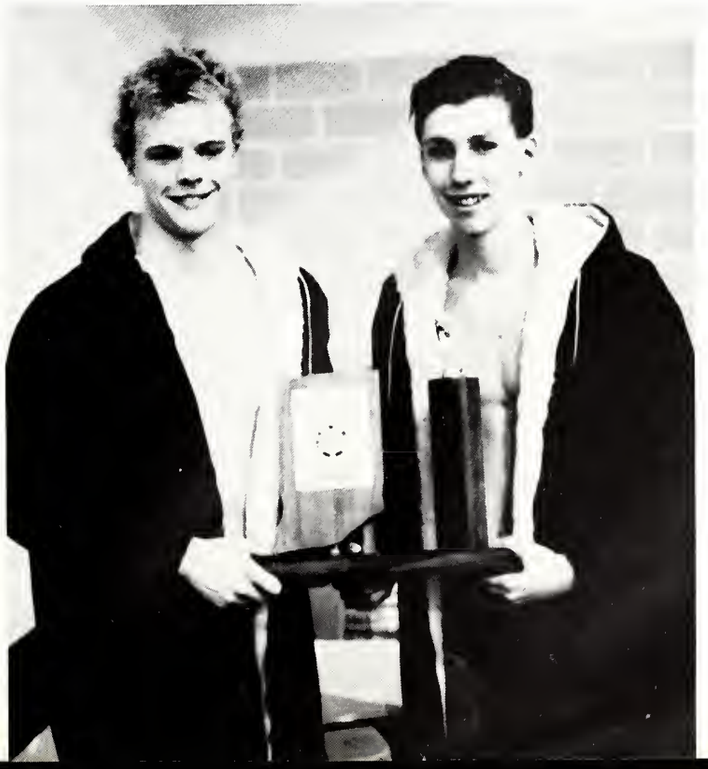
The boys' swimming team were Sectional champions also. Senior Guy Ruble placed first in the 100 yard backstroke and senior Jeff Leeke finished first in both the 100 yard butterfly and the 200 yard freestyle. This qualifed both seniors for the State competition. Along with Ruble and Leeke the 200 yard Medley Relay and the 400 yard Freestyle Relay qualifed for State by winning the Sectionals also. The Medley Relay was made up of seniors Andy Pflum, Doug Light, Sam Ladwig, and Ruble. Seniors Scott Wildaur, John Walesky, and Light, and Pflum took home the Sectional title in the Freestyle Relay event. Sectionals came pretty easily to the wrestlers, but they had to fight for the elusive Regional title. Beech Grove beat the grapplers at County, but the Warriors turned the tables when they beat the Hornets in the Regionals.

The gymnasts had a very successful season and were lead by junior Cathy Couch. The girls finished first in the Sectionals and second in the Regionals. They were beat out of a Regional title by just 2.8 points by Connersville. Couch lead the team with a first place in the floor exercise, seconds on the vault and the All-Around and a fourth on the balance beam. At State Couch finished fourth on the beam, eleventh on the vault, third in both the floor exercise and the All-Around.

The spring teams were not quite as successful as the fall and the winter ones. The No. one ranked softball team were the Sectional champions, but were denied the Regional title and a State berth by Perry Meridian in the Regional finals. The boys' golf team sent junior Rick Norman as their lone representative at the Regional meet.

- by Jennifer Vaughan.

Junior Carl Long leads the pack, just ahead of teammate John Schmidt and Chris Lohman.



Senior Jeff Leeke went to State in the 200 free and the 100 fly and Guy Ruble made it in the 100 back.

RAISING SPIRITS

Three squads support teams during seasons

"We got the spirit! What? What? We got the spirit!"

That was just one of the many cheers that could be heard coming from the varsity, junior varsity, and girls cheerleaders this year. Responsible for keeping up the spirit of the players and fans, cheerleaders of all three squads had a motto like the mailmen; neither rain, nor sleet, nor snow will stop us from delivering our cheers!

Last year's idea of having guy cheerleaders was used again this year. The guys chosen to be this year's basemen were J.R. Shamely, Creighton McGuire, Todd Wellmann, Kevin Bates, Jim Cridlin, Scott Schreiber, Scott Lorch, Rick Bacon, and Mike Stuart.

Senior varsity cheerleader Heather McGee, said the guy cheerleaders this year were as helpful as last year's. "They really kept the spirit up and made our cheers look better."

One of the many events the cheerleaders sposored this year was the Sweetheart Dance instead of the usual Christmas Dance. According to varsity cheerleading sponsor Cindy Taylor, the girls traded dances with the Rainbow Club because they already had a game scheduled for that night.

Varsity cheerleader junior Kathy Anderson said , "We had a lot of fun together this year. We were a lot closer than last year's squad. The only downfall was when Tammy left varsity, but after Julie came on it was great! The Sweetheart Dance went real well except we didn't bring as much money as we usually do with the Christmas Dance, but all in all it was a pretty good year."

ROLLING ALONG

Girls' Soccer, Bowling Clubs come into spotlight

Proving itself as part of Warren sports history, thisyear's girls' soccer team ended it's season as the first girls' team.

Soccer, the national sport of nearly all nations except the U.S., has just recently become a varsity sport at Warren.

As of last year the boys' team became sanctioned by the state, but the girls' team is still a club sport.

Although the girls' team finished winless, Mr. Gary Roberts, girls' and boys' coach, said, "This is one of the funnest things I have ever done at school, I really enjoyed it. I think it's something I hope continues. It was great."

High point of the season included, the North Central game when the girls scored more than one goal, and the State tournament. Coach Roberts believes the tournament was the girls' most courageous performance of the seaon.

With many visible weaknesses, the team most obvious was inexperience. "I think the strength of the team was the attitide. We knew we were not going to be a good team, but everybody played hard and tried to do well," said Coach Roberts.

Missy Nichols, senior, said, "I thought we had a really good team. It was the first year for girls' soccer, and I really think we made an impression for future years at Warren Central."

Seniors Delsy Craig, Tina Hanson, and sophomores Becky Prater, and Tammy Anderson all received varsity letters.

It was the sixth time Warren has come up with the correct combination of four bowlers to take first place honors in the Greater Indianapolis High School Bowling League.

"It's much harder to win a no handicap matchplay league than it is to win a regular league," said senior Bill Seprodi. "We didn't win the league because we had the best bowlers, but because we found the right combination to do it."

For eight weeks teams from around Indianapolis gather at All Star Bowl to compete. Teams for the 1987 season were from Warren, Franklin Central, Manual, Beech Grove, Arlington, and Greenwood.

Both Warren and Franklin Central took advantage of a new rule and fielded two teams. It was the Warren black team, that won the championship.

During the eight week mini-season, both Warren teams stayed in the upper half of the standings, but only the black team, seeded number two in the league, made it to the finals. Members of the black team, seniors Debbie Bradley, Bill Seprodi, Jim Abner, and sophomore David Gordon took a six point deficit into the final round and turned it into a 34 point victory, avcraging as a team over 185 a game. The team's total score for the championship round was 102 points. - by Michelle Hodge and Debbie Bradley.

Pictures of faces and places made this student body strong. With all the students knowing and believing that their class was indeed the best, spirit spread throughout the halls.

The Class of '89 came full force into school with over 800 students strong. Their numbers squeezed already crowded hallways to the absolute maximum. We knew that there would be problems with the large numbers and little student involvement. Mr Brist, principal, worried about the lack of student involvement, but this year's extracurricular events proved unique and well-attended.

However, it just wasn't the sophomores that went to school. Juniors proved that they could be heard as well as seen at school. Winning numerous spirit yelling contests at the pep ralleys, the juniors rallied around the school with everlasting spirit.

Yet, the seniors mustn't be forgotten. After attempts to start a "Senior Club", their spirit wouldn't be hampered by the administration. Though the administrators saw the club as a form of class discrimination, the seniors went on to prove that they indeed were school-spirited with the Senior Banquet, Homecoming festivities, and Senior Olympics.

So Mr. Brist's worries about lack of student linvolvement were not necessarily accurate. Granted some events did not go over as well as hoped, but the student body's spirit was well represented with all the activities planned and attended.

A crowded floor at the Homecoming Dance seems to make the action all the more fun.

Lighted faces of Honor Society members shine as they say their vows at the initiation.

Now We Know

By Jennifer Eley

If you look through a yearbook of ten years ago, you notice that many people were wearing glasses - in fact, a lot more than today. Is vision generally better now? No, it's contact lenses.

Varying in price from $39 to $200, contact lenses have steadily gained in popularity over the past few years. One reason for this is the price. As new technological advances are made, the price has gone down. For example, a couple of years ago, the price for soft, according to Sterling Optical, was $80. Now they are only $58.

Another reason for their popularity is the increased options available, such as hard, soft, or colored lenses. Hard lenses are smaller, but more difficult to get used to, and soft lenses are larger and extend past the colored part of the eye.

Going beyond the basic options, colored lenses, which are about $73, are for those who want to change their eye color. They are available in blue, green, teal, and brown. Also, extended wear contacts, for $68, are gaining popularity. They are more convenient since they don't require care every day.

Why would people prefer contacts over glasses? A Sterling Optical sales representative said, "People don't like glasses because they weigh on their nose, and contacts give better vision and are cosmetically better."

Bill Seprodi, senior, said, "My glasses made me look dorky, so I wanted contacts because a lot of peole don't know I had glasses. My contacts cause me a lot of trouble, though."

Another fact is time involved. With glasses, all you have to do is put them on. Contacts require time to clean them and put them on. Even then sometimes they irritate the eyes. But for some, it's worth the cosmetic value.

"It takes a while to clean my contacts, with all the care involved," said junior Margie Gibson.

Whichever option is chosen, depending on price and practicality, contact lenses are the vision of the future.

Now We Know

By Delvan Wood

November 4th, Election Day. Big deal, huh? "If we don't get out of school for it, it's not important," you say. Well, for an estimated 150 juniors and seniors who worked at the polls, Election Day did become an important day in their life.

These students volunteered most, if not all, of that Tuesday morning, afternoon, and evening to pass out literature, check off names, and telephone numbers, among other things.

"I volunteered my time at the polls because of the educational experience I would receive," said junior Dennis Linderman.

Many students added that this helped them to understand the political system and it gave them the knowledge of how to vote in the upcoming elections.

Teachers such as Mr. John Orr and Mr. John Barnes sponsored students who wanted to work at the polls this year.

They felt that working at the polls would be a real asset in their life.

Mrs. Rebecca Conner, 13th-ward vice committeeman commented, "It gives you a lot of experience and knowledge about the political system in our country."

She added that she worked at the polls as a teenager, and that the help the students give is "invaluable" to the committeemen.

Although many of the students benefitted from this experience, there were some who were disappointed in the way they were treated.

"(I was) being shut out and treated like a child," said senior Anita Hall. Anita added that she would not work again, if given the opportunity.

Many students enjoyed working, but, of course, there were mixed views on this topic. However, students had to admit that they had learned something they did not know before.

Anyone who's been through high school has had "Happy Birthday to you, Happy Birthday to you, Happy Birthday dear..." sung to them at least 17 times, but what is it that makes that song and all the fun, (or in some cases, embarrassment) that goes with it so special? What's the big deal about turning a year older?

"The older you get, the more experience you have and the more you've accomplished, so birthdays are sort of a reward for what you've done over the past year," said senior Angie Kleine.

Birthdays are always looked forward to, until, of course, one would like to stop counting. Perhaps the most honored, though, are the 16th, 17th, and 18th.

It all starts with 16 - commonly known as "Sweet 16." Many envision turning 16 as a social event, a sign that they have become a "real" teenager. For girls, it's a sign that they can date. Followers of the "Sweet 16" legend (who average about age 12) really believe that a red Mustang convertible automatically pops in your driveway fully equipped with the right guy or girl. Does it really happen that way-is 16 really that special?

Senior Julie Pursley thought so. "My sixteenth was really special because my boyfriend made dinner for me and we ate by candlelight. It was more than I expected."

For others, however, the vision didn't come true. "My sixteenth wasn't anything special," said senior Jody Reynolds. Senior David Ziemba had a similar experience. "My parents didn't even throw me a party."

After 16, a natural progression takes place and 17 is reached. Most agree that 17 lacks excitement. It's just a filler until you turn 18. Just 365 days to go.

Eighteen is a different matter. Senior Sue Schwartz said, "Turning 18 is like turning into a god. You feel so much older because you're legally an adult and younger kids look up to you. The only bad thing about it is that you're not a kid anymore."

Whatever the case, the special moments that come with 16, 17, and 18 add meaning to the saying, "Those are the best years of your life."

Every day you heard people complain about school and what should be changed in some way. So why not ask several students and faculty members what they would like to change if they could make changes?

Mike DiSanto, sophomore, felt that a ten minute passing period between classes would be the ticket to paradise, and that Warren Central students, including sophomores, should be allowed to drive to school.

Several students felt that the lunch periods should be longer, and the quality of the lunch served should be improved

Mr. Steve Comiskey, English teacher, would like to see the attendence policy changed. He suggested a plan that is similar to the summer school policy. His policy would limit the amount of hours a students could miss in a semester and still receive a credit for that course.

Monical Townsel, junior, wants to change the grading scale that is now used in Warren Township because it is too tough.

John Dodson, junior, feels that there should be a greater variety of classes available for students to take.

Some students, want to see teachers give less homework every night than they seem to be doing now.

Jeff Higbie, senior, thought that a seven period day would be beneficial to students who can't take all the courses they want.

Maybe some, if not all the students, feel the answer to making school better lies with their answer. Maybe they are right. Now, only if some of these ideal answers are used then some of the complaints about school might disappear.

R

By Sharon Daley

rrring... Am annoying buzzing interrupts my precious sleep time. Through the one eye I am able to open I see the bright light from my clock reading 7 a.m. And I thought it was Saturday. Then it all comes crashing in, it was Saturday, but not just any Saturday, it was ... SAT Saturday!

SAT Saturday is one of the most dreaded days of a student's school year. He is forced to sit in a cafeteria for three and one half hours of staring at words that he has never seen before and math problems that even the school math genius has trouble finishing.

Most students don't bother to study for the SATs (the Scholastic Appitutude Tests), but there are a few who do. "The first time I took an SAT class and the second time I just looked over the book I had from the first class. There's really no way to study for it (the SAT)," Lawona Roney, senior, said. Some books offer sample exams like the one senior Jill Bradshaw used to prepare for the test. "A friend had a book on the SAT and I took the sample test out of that," Jill said.

It is not uncommon for a student to take the test more than once, some may even take it three times. Usually by the time they have taken it once the students do not bother study for second time.

Then of course the student sees one of those articles written by "experts" saying how little the results of the SAT matters to a college admissions office. So on top of worrying about the test itself he has to worry about how much influence his results will have on his getting into the college of his choice.

So, the next time you sit down to take that test, remember what the experts say about your scores, but don't take them too lightly.

Now We Know

Finally! Time to go home! After a hard day at school, the last thing I want to mess with is finding a way home. Walking out to the parking lot I notice that all of my friends' cars are filled to the max. Left on the curb waving, I decide to be daring and ride the bus.

Looking around I try to convince myself that it really won't be that bad. It's only a fifteen minute ride and if I don't talk to anyone maybe no one will recognize me. As I sit there staring out the window, trying not to listen to all the sophomore jabber, I notice my friends in the car below and hunch down in the seat for fear that they might see me.

Glancing at my watch I notice that it's already five 'til three and the busses are still trying to get out of the parking lot. Thinking I could have got there quicker by walking, I try to pass the time.

I suppose that it would be my luck that the bus driver decides to take the scenic route home , turning that 15 minute ride into a dreadful half an hour. Looking outside I see that we're finally on a real street, and I found myself counting the broken yellow lines that divide the lanes. When I reached 150 I found it as boring as chemistry and decided to quit. As I looked around the bus I noticed there are 12 blondes, 10 brunettes and one redhead. eleven of which are girls, the rest guys.

The sophomores continue to jabber and to my shocking surprise I was so bored I started to listen. In my eves-dropping I found out that Heather liked Greg and that Jack and Jill broke up. All of a sudden the bus came to a devastating halt, as I looked up I noticed that I was in MY neighborhood. As the bus wound around the corner I could see my house at the end of the street.

I look back on this memorable ride, such a sentimental moment, one to cherish for life, as the moment that made me finally decide what to ask good ole' Santa Clause for, for Christmas...a CAR!!

What is America's biggest pastime? Many would say sports such as baseball or football, going to the movies, or just socializing.

The right answer, however, is watching television.

At the top of popularity heap for the '86-'87 season was the almighty "Cosby Show," as much a favorite as it was the year before. Following in the Thursday night lineup were NBC's other giants - "Family Ties", "Cheers," "Night Court," and "Hill Street Blues."

"'The Cosby Show,' 'Family Ties,' and 'Cheers,' and 'Night Court' gave me a chance to laugh and I don't get that chance too often," junior Andy Smith said.

Another returning hit was "Moonlighting." "I like detective shows and this is an off-beat funny one, so I adore it," said junior Keith Coleman.

"Miami Vice" was still popular although some fans lost interest. "I used to like the show, but it became too monotonous," senior Michelle Hodge said.

Other strong favorites were "Muder She Wrote," "Newhart," "Kate and Allie," "Cagney and Lacey," "St. Elsewhere," and others. Then there was that group of loyal "Dynasaty," "Colbys," and "Dallas" fans.

Then there was cable with draws such as "Not Necessarily the News" on HBO and "It's Garry Shandling's Show" on Showtime. Movies continued to be the main staple of the cable diet, except for the diehard MTV fans.

But junior Todd Melloh summed it up for many, "My life's not worth living if there's not a game on."

Now We Know

Peanuts, popcorn, candied apples, and the ferris wheel; all of these things were a part of this year's Indiana State Fair. Along with those things, Warreners were a part of this year's State Fair.

Included in the fair's festivities was senior Karen Shircliff. Karen was voted 1986 Marion County Fair Queen from 43 contestants. Being made Queen automatically made her eligible to be in the State Fair Queen pageant. Making it to the final 10, Karen said, "I was happy making it that far in the contest."

Cooling off fairgoers, Mr. Al Morgan, Biology and Genetics teacher, ran a lemon shake-up stand at the fair. Mr. Morgan's business started out as a partnership with Walker Career Center assistant principal, Mr. David Geise. Mr. Morgan said that the work was easy, once students got used to the hustle and bustle. "I've had students work for me once and they were sore for hours. It takes some getting used to," he said.

Sophomore Sheryl Lamey's involvement at the fair was at the WIBC booth, stuffing bags with coupons. Sheryl said a disadvantage of working was, "The days were very hot and long. It seemed like you lived in the booth some days." Sheryl said an advantage was that the pay was good and no taxes were taken out of the paycheck.

Whether students won contests, cooled fairgoers, or stuffed bags, they did more than just go to the fair. - By Montel Thompson

In the second year of the Prelude Awards, sponsored by The Children's Museum and The Penrod Society, Warren Central had more winners than any other school from nearly 400 hopefuls.

Senior Mary Egner in Dance and senior Gregory Ledford in Theater were first place scholarship winners and junior Neil McMonigle in Visual Art and Eric Adams in Instrumental Music were among the finalists.

Preliminary competition took place Jan. 17 at four area high schools.

The 24 finalists, along with 72 other top students selected during the competition, were invited to attend the 1987 Prelude Awards Academy in June for five days of intensive lectures, workshops and study with practicing artists.

Scholarship money was awarded to the finalist in each of the areas and the high schools of the award recipients will receive $500 cultural enrichment grants.

Mary and Greg each received a $1000 scholarship.

Fashions! Every day a very important question runs through the average teenage girl's mind. What do I wear today?

So what did Warren girls wear during the 1986-87 school year?

No need to have cold feet about new shoes because the newspaper USA TODAY told about all the new 1986 fall styles.

Manufactures gathered in New York to preview the fall styles at the National Shoe Fair and they promised a shoe for every taste.

Some footnotes on women's fall shoe trends were -

Fur things first. Leopard and pony prints and Russian-inspired fur trimmed boots put pizazz into weekend wardrobes.

Crocodile Dundee. Texture was the message. Women stepped into shoes made of real or fake crocodile, ostrich, tortoise, and elephant.

Tennis Shoes - All colors, all kinds, from low to high tops.

Classy classics. Look for sophisticated pumps and moccasins in dulled colors, sumptuous leather, lambskin, crocodile or patent leather.

Boots, boots, boots. It was the comeback of the boot: Casual, military-inspired boots; lace-up Victorian boots; classic riding boots and ethic-looking suede boots were all stylish last fall.

Feminine, choked-up shoes in dusky colors with pointy toes and curve heels recalling turn-of-the-century styles were also popular.

Kathy Wright, a graduate of Warren, said, "I absolutely love pointy-toes shoes and I cannot wait until I can get a pair at Washington Square.

There is even a great pair of shoes for those Indian-loving shoe people. The studded suede evening shoes will appeal to rhinestone cowgirls while the fringed boots and suede moccasins are a must for weekent spent in a Sante Fe state of mind.

Sales of pumps more than doubled in the past five years. In 1986 they made up 23 percent of all women's shoe sales and teens are wearing them too, even to school with jeans.

Senior girls prepare for a styleshow before the prom.

What to wear?

Trying to fingure out what clothes, shoes, and hair styles are in fashion is one of the many problems of Warren students. Whether it be jean's labels, miniskirts, punk or preppie outfits, kids will go to any extent to be known as one of the "in" people.

Three of the most "looked up to" designers - Ralph Lauren, Perry Elis, and Calvin Klein - have become the stellar influences in American fashion, according to Phylis Feldcamp in her article "When the superstars of American Fashion speak." She says that people sit up and pay attention to what they say and you just have to look around the halls at Warren and see the influence they have had on teenage fashion.

How much do we judge people by how they look? Susan Bixler, author of The Professional Image said, "In this country, fifty-five percent of what we believe about one another - whether or not a perons is well-educated, intelligent, competent, or popular is based on our observation and interpretation of non-verbal signals. This consists of two major components, wardrobe and body language."

Certainly one of the "in" looks this past year was the denim look - in everything from skirts to dresses, and many of the dresses and tops had touches of delicate lace. Lace was really "in."

Along with the rage in boots came the total western look with fringe and all.

Pop colors and designs were still very popular, particularly for tops for both guys and gals.

Prom time brought out the love for really dressy togs, and gowns ranged from slinky to sedate.

"What to wear?" will always be the teenage cry.

Now We Know

Every day you hear people complaining about school and who think it should be changed in someway. Why not ask students what they would change about school if they could change it?

The answer of this question varied with each person who was asked. Some students felt that making the lunch hours longer and improving the quality of the lunch served would be the answer.

Stacey Dersey, sophomore, would like to see an open campus where students would be allowed to leave school at lunch and either go to a fast-food restaurant for lunch or be allowed to go home.

Mr. Steve Comiskey and Miss Pegge Masterson both would like to see the attendance policy changed. Mr. Comiskey suggested a system similar to the summer school policy. His policy would limit the number of hours a students could miss in a semester and still receive a credit for that course.

Mike Disanto, sophomore, felt that a ten minute passing period instead of the six minutes would be the ticket and he also thought students who have their license, including sophomores, should be allowed to drive to school.

Monica Townsel, junior, wants to change the grading scale that is now used in Warren Township so it is not so hard.

John Dodson, junior, thinks that if students had more classes available school would be more interesting. Of course, some students think that less homework would be an ideal change.

Jeff Higbie, senior, thought that a seven period day would be beneficial.

Maybe some, if not all students, feel the answer to making school better lies with their answer. Maybe they are right. If some of these ideas and answers were used the number of complaints about school might go down considerably. - By Thomas Johnson

Everyone has had that feeling of being afraid at a new place with new surroundings and strange faces, but imagine a large school with two floors, hundreds of rooms, and about 2500 people arunning up and down the halls. Sound scarey? Ask a sophomore how scarey it really is.

"I was mainly scared of the larger school and getting lost," sophomore Angie Dillon said, while Matt Gibson bragged, "I wasn't really afraid of anything."

Sure you weren't. Everyone, even if they won't admit it has had some sort of fear prior to entering high school. Common fears range from being made fun of, not knowing anyone in a class or dropping a tray full of food in the middle of the cafeteria.

A blank stasre, 10 books weighting down the arms, a fast-paced walk, and a nervous shake all show signs of a fearful sophomore. Plus they seem to gather in tight huddles and giggle a lot.

Many of the sophomores feel that the high school provides more freedom than the junior highs. For some this is good, but for others this can be scarey.

Next time you see a wide-eyed guy or gal standing in the middle of the foyer looking like they want to go home or anywhere but school, remember everyone was a sophomore once.

"Yeah! Rah! Sis boom ba!"

It's time to sing the school song, break out the black and gold, the letter weaters, the...togas?

Spirit days at the ol' WC is traditionally a time to think of school pride, but with a little modern Warrior excitement, it's also a time for togas, Hawaiian gear, and pajamas.

Speaking for the student council as activity coordinator, Beth Stauffer, senior, said, "We're really trying to promote school spirit, break monotony, and get everyone involved in something. I think the ones who do participate make it for the ones who don't."

Beth, whose favorite dress-up days are Nerd Day and Toga Day, said if she could make up her own day it would be Mafia Day. She laughs, "It would be great! Trenchcoats, hats, the whole works!"

Sophomore Kim Weaver's make-your-won day would be be Bodybuilders Day, while Craig Steele, sophomore, wants Egyptian Day.

Kim said, "If people participate in Spirit Days, they're more involved and enthused."

Some students really get into the spirit while others had a more relaxed attitude. Brian Strauss, senior, said although he usually dresses for them, his favorite is Black and Gold Day because, "It's easy." He showed his rowdier side, however, when he said he'd like to have Combat Day as his make-your-own day.

Holly Buchanan, senior, had an elaborate Greek-looking toga on Toga Day. She said, "I like to have school spirit and help support the team."

Whether it's a trenchcoat, a nerd outfit equipped with a note from Mom and a Snoopy lunchbox, or pajamas, it's fun to back the teams. By Jennifer Vaughan

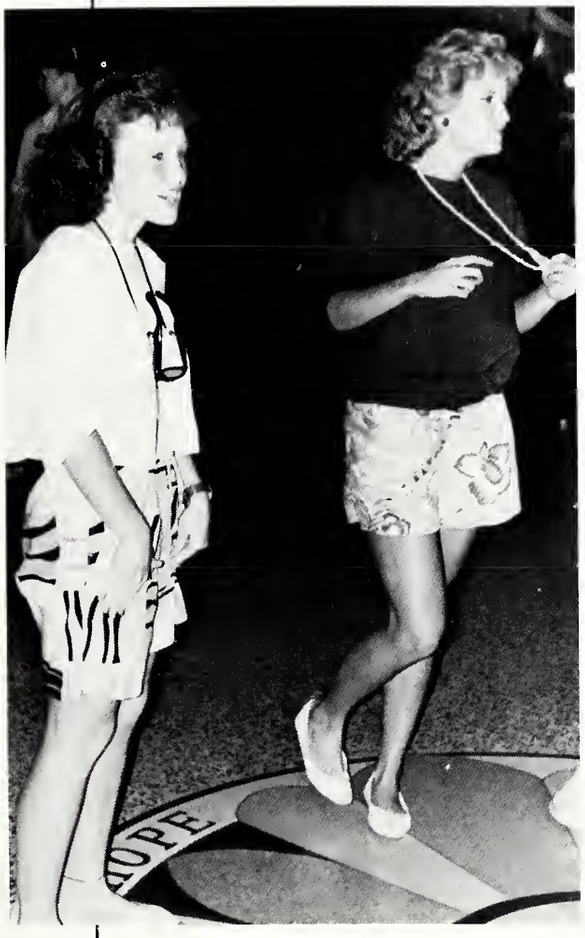
Love to spend money on clothes?



JAMS shorts and the ever popular sweatshirts found their way to school everyday and ever to events such as the WEDM Beach Bash.

IOU, Forenza, Coca-Cola. What do these three words have in common? They're the three biggest names being bought and worn by Warren Central students.

According to a random poll taken of students, the best stores to shop at are DJ's Fashions for Men, Merry-Go-Round, The Limited, and Ayres. All of these stores can be found in surrounding malls such as Washington Square.

This year there seemed to be more to fall fashion than met the eye, most of which met the pocketbook.

According to the assistant manager of Merry-Go-Round, Tim Sizemore, the average amount of money being spent by high school students ranged anywhere between $50 to $80, most of which was being spent on IOU sweatshirts which ranged in price from $25 to $35.

Another popular name this fall was Coca-Cola. The rugby-type shirt and the sweatshirts were both selling extremely well. Coca-Cola clothing could be found at Lazarus and at Ayres, although cheaper at Lazarus. The Coca-Cola shirts ran anywhere from $35 to $45.

If IOU and Coca-Cola just were'nt the names that fit your image, maybe Forenza brand clothes were more your style. Also a big name last fall, Forenza was was by far the most expensive look of fashion.

If you weren't one of the few who rushed out and bought one of those fabulous sweatshirts and were looking for a less expensive route, maybe you bought suspenders. "Everyone's buying suspenders," said the clerk in Ayres Junior Department.

Suspender pants came in several different styles including the sweatpants with suspenders look. Fortunately enough these pants came in a variety of prices, ranging from $25 to $45. They were found at Ayres and DJ's Fashions for Men.

Larger attendance, donors expected at drive

By Montel Thompson

Larger attendance and more donors are the goals anticipated for this year's Blood Drive sponsored by the Central Indiana Regional Blood Center, Thursday, Feb. 26, in the Student Center/Basketball north gym concession stand.

Before the drive the Regional mascot, Charlie the Corpuscle, will be in the cafeteria Tuesday, Feb. 10 and 17, to encourage students. Teachers will receive blood donor forms in their mailboxes to pass out to those students interested in donating blood.

Forms are to be turned in to Mrs. Caldwell by Feb. 20. Thursday, Feb. 12, a Blood Center representative will be speaking to the Government and Economics classes.

Appointment cards will be issued to donors on Tuesday, Feb. 24.

Mrs. Winn Ramer, school nurse, is hoping for more donors to participate in the Blood Drive this year than last. She is also encouraging faculty, as well as students, to give this year. Of the 252 people that signed up to donate last year, 203 actually gave blood. Of that number only 17 were adults.

Also, Mrs Ramer wanted to inform donors that the possibilty of catching AIDS from donating blood is totally impossible. All equipment used in the drive will be sterile and used only once.

Ms. Carol Summers of the Regional Blood Center public relations staff said that students are their biggest suppliers. Because of student donors, their inventory at the Blood Center has grown. But in light of the recent shortage, donations are badly needed.

Student Council will be the hosts and hostesses. Cookies donated by the Threshold and orange juice donated by the cafeteria will be served before and after to donors.

In Brief

Sweatheart Dance: Sponsoring this year's Valentine's Dance to be held on Feb.28 in the foyer from 8 to 11 p.m.will be the boy's varsity and the junior varsity cheerleaders.

The tickets for the dance will be sold by advanced sales and will cost $3 for a single and $5 for a couple. Pictures will be available by Tower Studios and dress attire will be semi-formal with no jeans allowed.

According to the cheerleader sponsor, Cindy Taylor, the dance is being called the Sweetheart's Dance and is being held on the 28th because of a conflict with the girl's regional basketball game in the gym Feb.14.

Miss Taylor said that this will be the cheerleader's major fundraiser for the year and she invites everyone to come and have an evening of fun and entertainment.

Winter Homecoming Sockhop: Putting an end to a successful week of Winter Homecoming activities such as the class competitions and dress day, the Winter Homecoming sockhop will take place in the foyer tonight right after the game.

Tickets will be sold at the door for $1 and a student I.D. must be shown to be allowed in.

Playing the hits from the 50's, WEDM will also play the hit music of today. Dressing in 50's attire is optional, but be sure to wear socks.

Beth Stauffer, chairperson of the sockhop, said she hopes the dance will be a successful end to the first Winter Homecoming and that many people will show up and support the dance.

Carousel: Rehearsals for the spring musical Carousel started this week. It will be presented in the Performing Arts Center on March 19, 20, 21.

Playing the main lead of Julie Jordan will be Sheila Duffer. Other students playing major roles are Heather McGee

Rapist search continues

Over the past month, Warren Township residents have been continually plagued by fear of an at large rapist who strikes primarily in the area.

Playing the main lead of Julie Jordan will be Sheila Butler. Other students playing major roles are Heather McGee Hall as Nettie Fowler, Greg Ledford as Enoch Snow, and Ted Green as Jiggs Craigin. Amy Pangburn, Andy Lynch, and Tim Hampton have supporting leads.

Directing the musical will be Mr. Thom Feit, Mr. Phil Dunn, Mr. Ken Lewis, and Ms. Kelly Butler.

Prom: Many changes have developed in this year's prom. Unlike previous years, the 1987 prom will not be held in the school's gym, rather it will be held in the school cafeteria.

"This is the time to remember" and "Somewhere out there" are the themes being considered, while pink and silver, peach and ivory, and rose and ivory are the considered colors

Student Council secretary Lisa Preston said,"The prom could be really beautiful and successful, but it depends on what attitude the student body takes. I think we can turn the cafeteria into a beautiful place to have the prom and the student body will be happy with the results."

1001 is this year's band. Senior David Ziemba said, "It will be just as good as last year if not better. They are a young band full of energy."

primarily in the area.

Although similar incidents since February of 1986, several have occured within the last month. According to Lieutenant Bill Moore, officer in charge of sexual offense at the Marion County Police Department, it wasn't until recently that they linked the cases together.

"We didn't realize what we had on our hands until about a month ago," Mr. Moore said. "It wasn't happening on a regular basis until about a month ago."

Description of the man has been limited by his disguise. He wears a dark ski mask. Other concurring details are that he is a white male about 5"10 and weighs approximately 170 pounds. A man of about the same description was reported once but wearing a stocking instead. The man has also been said to drive a maroon vehicle.

Captain John Butler, Warren Schools Security chief, said that he had received a number of calls regarding the suspected rapist and has turned all that information over to Mr. Moore.

No other increased security has been added by Captain Butler's men, but Captain Butler related that on one Tuesday he did respond to a call of a disturbance and went to a nearby residential street where he sat in his car and watched for suspicious activity.

In all, 13 similar cases have been reported. The Marion County Police Department is handling the majority of them with nine on their hands. The Indianapolis Police Department is in charge of three and the state, one.

The rapist tactics include among other things, cutting the phone wires of his soon to be victims. This is what makes him so hard to catch according to Mr. Moore.

"The victim loses her means of communication and is stranded from any help she may have previously had access to," he said.

A mistake that the panicked victim often makes is that of trying to hide in the house rather than exit. "Get out of the house as quickly as you can. Don't try to hide," Mr. Moore said. "He'll find you. Run, Moore's theory behind this tactic is that your neighbor's involvement will come into play then. He says that this is the best way to catch the rapist. "Scream or do whatever you have to make as much noise as you can and get out of there."

Two years ago, there was a similar string of rape incidents occurring on the northside of Indianapolis. Bill Moore played a central role in the capturing of the man responsible for those crimes as well.

"When we catch this man, he'll be in there for a long time," Mr. Moore said.

With charges of breaking and entering, armed assault, as well as the actual rape charge, this man could get 70 years for an isolated incident. When that figure is multiplied times nine incidents in the Marion County jurisdiction alone, reasonable belief is that he will spend the rest of his life in prison.

Although the organization was not at liberty to disclose information as to whether it had treated any of these victims, Gallahue Mental Health Center did explain what kind of treatment would be available and what the victims would need to face.

"We counsel them in dealing with safety, fear of the return of the attacker, others' reactions, self-esteem, a change in their attitude toward their body, as well as others," ACS social worker Marilyn Griffith said.

She continued saying more often than not, a victim's recovery depends largely on support she receives from her family and friends. "The woman must have the support of her spouse, family, and friends in order to recover quickly and completely."

Moore urged, "If you see anything at all that looks suspicious, call immediately."

Unfortunately, area residents are hesitant to call according to the lieutenant. "I was out just this morning in my street clothes and no squad car. Many people looked out their windows and locked their doors, but when I called in, not a single person had called in," Moore said.

"They should have reported me."

Warren Pan Am Festival: A

Warren Township schools Pan Am Festival will be held Saturday, April 11 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Warren Central High School.

Activities planned include baking and piñata contests, posters, performances by various school music groups, a style show, and displays relating to art and cultural topics. Sports demonstrations and ethnic food sampling will also be featured.

Entry forms for the Bake Off may be picked up at the high school or junior high offices and must be returned by March 25 with a $1 entry fee or may be sent to Mrs. Jean Bardonner, Creston Junior High, 10925 E. Prospect, Indianapolis 46239, or Mrs. Susan Zody, Stonybrook Junior High School, 11300 Stonybrook Drive, Indianapolis 46229. Entrants will be sent a complete set of contest rules.

The Piñata Contest is open to all students of MSD Warren Township and must be original productions.

*They must be entered through a class/teacher so that their originality can be verified and proper credit given.

*Each piñata should be wired at its construction so that it can be hung for display without difficulty.

*Piñatas should be constructed light enough for stuffing and hanging without breaking but NO TREATS SHOULD BE IN THEM WHEN THEY ARE ENTERED. Only those piñatas that are constructed with an opening for filling will be accepted.

*The piñata should reflect the culture of Hispanic countries or the theme of the Pan Am Games.

*Piñatas will be used for decoration during the day and a number of them broken during the activities. Winning piñatas will be displayed April 14(Pan American Day) and returned to the owners.

*All piñatas that are not broken should be picked up by the owners at the end of the day or by Monday of the following week.

*The name of the owner and the school from which he/she comes should be attached to the wiring at the top of the piñata.

*[illegible] planned that are related to the Pan Am Games(caps, shirts, buttons) the specific ones for a first.

Tainted coffee sends teacher to hospital, senior to juvenile

By Debbie Bradley and Christy Whalen

Security has tightened at Warren Central since an incident on March 6 sent economics teacher Ron Schatz to the hospital after a substance put into his coffee by a student caused him to become "severly ill and disoriented."

According to Marion County Sheriff Herman D. Humble's report on the incident, "the sheriff's department was called to Warren Central after a senior girl gave statements to several school administrators that at approximately 9 a.m. she placed several pellets of an unknown substance into Mr. Ron Schatz's cup of coffee. Mr. Schatz was shortly thereafter taken to Community [illegible] foreign substance was identified in the victim's blood or body system."

enough. "At this point I'm not pressing charges. As long as the lesson is learned, I have no vindictive charges against her. She herself said that she didn't dislike me,"

Games(e.g., shirts, buttons) the specific ones for a first, second, or third to be announced in the near future.

The Social Studies departments is sponsoring a poster display with sports, cultural, political, and economic themes from the avarious Pan Am countries.

A fashion show is being planned to model active sport, spectator, and dress outfits appropriate for Pan Am Events, and any shop or store interested in participating should call 898-6133, ext. 211.

Hispanic origin groups who would enjoy sharing in these events are also invited to join in and should call 898-6133, ext. 211.

foreign substance was identified in the victim's blood or body system."

"They may never know what it is," said Warren Central Principal Ken Brist, regarding the substance placed in the coffee. He also added that cocaine and heroin, however, have been ruled out.

"The school felt that her behavior was serious enough to warrant police involvement," said Mr. Brist.

The Marion County Sheriff's Department did come and arrest the student on a misdemeanor charge of battery with injury and she was taken to the Juvenile Center.

The administration took action too, immediately placing the student on a 5-day suspension, and recommending expulsion to the superintendent, according to the guidelines of Public Law 162 as stated in the Student Rules and Regulations Handbook, page 15, section 10.

Acting Superintendent Niles Daggy appointed Administrative Assistant Ken Zody as hearing officer of the case, and he contacted the student to advise her of her right to have a hearing. If she intends to protest the recommended expulsion, she must contact Mr. Zody within ten days. If she makes no contact within the allotted time period, expulsion will be automatically carried out.

Mr. Schatz feels that this is penalty from teachers and students as well on his first day back in the classroom after the incident. Mr. Schatz said that he was worried about returning to school on Monday because he didn't quite know what the response would be, but since everyone was so supportive, it was a "very easy day". His attitude towards students changed, but it was only in a very positive way. He said that because of the response and support he received upon his return, he has the most positive feelings he's had for students in 25 years.

Although the student involved in the tainting has not made a statement leading to any accomplices, information volunteered by numerous other students has led officials to believe that there may have been others involved. Mr. Brist, however, said that he wouldn't want to take any action against a student entirely on the basis of hearsay.

According to an article by Barb Albert in the March 13 Indianapolis Star, a senior boy implicated in the incident has also been suspended, but for what Mr. Brist said was for another reason.

Responding as to whether there were other students involved in the tampering, Mr. Brist said, "It appears that way."

Even after an announcement was made over the P.A. urging both students and teachers not to talk to anyone about the incident unless they were sure of their facts, several rumors regarding the tainted coffee circulated. One of the more prominent ones questioned the number of teachers involved, suggesting that there may have been another tampering incident on Thursday. Mr. Brist acknowledged the fact that student reports of this are being investigated.

An incident involving a cup of coffee caused Economics teacher Ron Schatz to go to the hospital and a senior girl to be sent to juvenile center on battery charges Photo by Christy Whalen

"We're not 100 percent sure," even though this one particular teacher showed some of the same symptoms," Mr. Brist said.

Because of the actions of this senior, who was a student assistant, some of the priviledges of student assistants have been taken away, one being that they are no longer permitted in workrooms to run copies because of access to coffee pots. Also no students are to be in the teacher's eating or lounge areas.

Of the incident as a whole, Mr. Schatz said, "The sooner it's put behind us, the better it is for everyone, as long as we've learned something."

Fewer numbers than hoped hope to sing for Mickey at Disneyland

By Heather Clark and Linda Bresland

"California here we come!" is what members of Golden Singers, Windsors, Trebletones, and Madrigals are saying as they get ready to travel by air to Anaheim, California, where they hope to have the opportunity to sing at Disneyland.

Although the number of students has dropped from the original list of 95 to 65, according to Mr. Phil Dunn, the trip attendance decline came from some students feeling they couldn't raise the $599.

The choir department had fundraisers like candy and wrapping paper sales to help students meet that cost.

The Choir Parents Organization also sponsored a car wash in September and a dinner in February. Both were quite successful but still many students did not seem to be able to raise the needed money.

The group will perform twice at the Disneyland Hotel, once at Sea World at San Diego, and on the Queen Mary oceanliner. They will visit Disneyland and enjoy a day at the beach.

Seven adults will accompany the group, including Mr. and Mrs. Phil Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lewis, Don Weilhamer, Mrs. Martha Cappes, and school nurse Winn Ramer.

The group will leave Warren Central for the airport at 6 a.m. on Saturday, March 28 and return on April 1.

Among the selections prepared for the trip are a medley from the Broadway show Chorus Line by the Trebletones, and the Madrigals are preforming Hurrah for Hollywood.

"I think the trip will be great publicity for all the choirs. I can't wait!" commented junior Madrigal member Gordon Caudill.

724 to receive diplomas

"It's going to be a little bit classier place...and add to the pomp and circumstance," Principal Kenneth Brist said of the graduation scheduled for the first time at Market Square Arena on Wednesday, May 20

By Nathan Fawkes

Seven hundred and twenty-four seniors will receive their diplomas Wednesday, May 20, at 7:30 p.m. at Market Square Arena. For the first time Principal Kenneth Brist will hand out the diplomas.

Market Square was chosen as the site of commencement because the Coliseum was booked up. Some concern was expressed about parking and the night of commencement, but overall response has been positive.

Mr. Brist said, "It's going to be a little bit classier place, I think, and add to the pomp and circumstance."

allowable because only the bottom half of the arena was rented.

Warren was only charged a nominal fee for use of the arena which basically covers Market Square's expenses. Mrs. Carol Montgomery, who is in charge of arrangements, was also appreciative of Market Square's cooperation.

On Wednesday, the day of commencement, all seniors will assemble at 8:15 a.m. in the northeast parking lot (across from the tennis courts). At 8:30 a.m. they will board a convoy of 18 buses which will take them to Market Square Arena.

Commencement rehearsal will start at 9:15 a.m., and last until approximately noon. At 6:30 that night, preparations will begin for the actual ceremony, and at 7:30 commencement will start.

Class valedictorian and salutatorian will be announced during the program along with the Askren Scholarship winners.

The three speakers for the senior class, selected by the Commencement Committee, will deliver their speeches. They are Dawn Apple, Jennifer Koehler, and Kevin Patterson.

Not only is this year a first for Mr. Brist, but also for Mrs. Carol Montgomery. This is her first year as commencement coordinator, although she worked with Mr. Clifford Gates in past years.

Mrs. Montgomery said there was little trouble in making the transition, although there are many more details to see to now.

She also had praise for the Commencement Committee, sponsored by herself and Mrs. Dee Caldwell. She said it was the best Commencement Committee she has ever worked with.

The committee consists of: Dana Anderson, Scott Black, Jim Cridlin, Jessica Espiritu, Cathy Freeland, Greg Hall, Scott Hall, Jenny Havlin, Janie Herrick, Melissa Holtman, Cathy Johnson, Scott Lorch, Amanda McCoy, Kevin Patterson, Lisa Preston, Lawana Roney, John Schmidt, Beth Toombs, Raelynn Wilson, and David Ziemba. Members were chosen by guidance counselors and administrators.

Commenting on the fruit of his efforts, committee member Jim Cridlin said, "I really enjoyed it and I got to meet people. It was hard work, but when everybody gets down there, I think they'll see it paid off."

Although there was little trouble last year, clapping and cheering by parents and relatives has been a problem in the past.

"If the next person's name cannot be heard, then it's not fair -- and it spoils the dignity of the ceremony," Mrs. Montgomery said.

Mrs. Montgomery also expressed some of her feelings about commencement. "Kids are just going to graduate only one time..It's a family time."

She also said that despite her involvement in Commencement the past few years, the ceremony still has an effect on her.

Mr. Brist expressed his expectations of this year's commencement. "Hopefully it's going to be a very nice ceremony that people are going to remember for a while."

"I think the attitude of the kids and teachers has been great, and we hope nothing's going to happen to mar what's been a great year."

Senior Week breaks, makes tradition

By Heather Clark

Along with the change of holding commencement during the week in Market Square Arena, senior week and senior activities have gone through a change also.

Seniors had a chance on Wednesday to attend the senior dinner which was held in the cafeteria from 6:30 to 11:00 p.m. Music was played by WEDM and senior most likely awards were given out.

This past week, seniors could participate in dress-up days. Monday was clone day, Tuesday was dress like a little kid day, Wednesday was senior sweatshirt and decorated jean day, Thursday was beach day, and Friday was dress-up day.

A new idea introduced by Mr. Brist was put to work on Thursday morning. The senior picture was taken during school at 8 a.m. and seniors were able to purchase a copy for $12. Senior Yvonne Eyre said she thought the picture was an excellent idea. "It's one of the best ways we can remember our class."

Mr. Brist said, "Kids like to come back to their school and say 'there I was when I graduated.'" According to Mr. Brist the picture will begin a new tradition and be hung in the hallway for future classes to see. This idea was used at Crown Point and Richmond when he previously worked.

Senior Student Council member Jim Cridlin said, "Instead of following a tradition, we are going to start a new one." The idea of a senior picture has brought on a whole new sense of enthusiasm to the graduating classs of 1987.

Putting an end to senior activities will be Senior Olympics, which will take place after school on Tuesday, May 19. The games will take place in the stadium and will consist of events such as a three legged race, sack race, and either a trieycle or wheelbarrow race. Student Council members will be running the events. Team entry forms were due Wednesday of this past week.

Dr. Douglas Otto is new superintendent

By Nathan Fawkes

The new superintendent of Warren Township is Douglas W. Otto, who is currently superintendent of North Scott Community School District of Eldridge, Iowa, near Davenport. He will take up the post June 1.

After Dr. John D. Light's resignation last June, a search was begun in September to fill the position. A panel including representatives of the administration, teachers, parents, staff, and the community narrowed the 60 applicants to 10 and then to the final five who were interviewed.

Dr. Otto learned of his selection as superintendent soon after the final interviews in late March. He said he was "really ecstatic and gratified" upon hearing the news.

Dr. Otto will be introduced to the township at a briefing April 22 at the Warren Performing Arts Center.

Dan Lazear, vice-president of the Warren Township school board and chairman of the community committee that decided on the criteria for the new superintendent, said, "He was the only candidate of those five that we had a unanimous decision on."

Mr. Lazear also cited Dr. Otto's superior communicating skills, the high morale he instills, and his success with improving achievement scores. Mr. Lazear said, "He's got a terrific handle on the future of education."

Dr. Otto, 37, has directed a district-wide computer literacy program at North Scott that included word processing in fourth grade and programming in fifth grade, with more extensive use in the upper grades.

"We think we're definitely a leader in the use of computers for administrative uses and educational uses," Dr. Otto said.

When asked whether he might implement similar programs here in Warren Township, he said it would first depend on the current status here. But he added, "I've had some good experiences implementing that technology."

Some of the other programs he's initiated are a staff and student recognition program and an employee assistance program, in order to improve "school climate for students and staff", particularly teachers.

"The most important aspect of the educational process is the classroom teacher," he said.

When asked if he has any doubts or concerns about the move to Warren Township, he said his most immediate concern between now and July 1 is moving to Indianapolis.

"The most difficult part is being so far away and trying to sell the house." He explained that the housing market is depressed in that area.

As far as doubts, he said, "I really don't have any doubts about coming over there. I know coming there was anything but a mistake."

Dr. Otto said he was looking forward to "a chance to get into the schools and meet some of the students."

"I think people will find I'm very open and visible."

Orr sells his A+ program

By Yolanda Smith

"I can think of no better investment of Hoosier tax dollars than a program that will equip our children with skills needed to learn and relearn for the rest of their lives," Govenor Robert D. Orr

Govenor Robert D. Orr and H. Dean Evans, Indiana Superintendent of Public Instruction, have proposed Indiana's A+ Program for Educational Excellence to help deal with the problems of education in Indiana.

The problem, according to Gov. Orr is that students in Indiana schools are losing the race for the future - the race for the best jobs of tomorrow because Indiana schools don't measure up.

Indiana ranks 47th out of 50 states in average SAT scores with an average combined math and verbal score of 874.

Indiana also ranks 47th among states in the percentage of its population that has completed at least four years of college.

The A+ Program focuses on Aspirations, Achievement and Accountability.

The key recommendations include mandatory competency testing in seven grades with remediation for those who need it for promotion, required performance evaluation for teachers and principals, a change in the school accrediation system that would tie accrediation to performance, and adding ten days to the school year.

"America does not fully understand or appreciate the change in the workplace, therefore it's hard for people to understand why we need to make more requirements for education," Gov. Orr said. "We are cheating our children by not giving them enough time to learn," he added.

In the Far East, Chinese and Japanese students go to school 240 days. "In those countries they go to school at least three or four more years education wise than kids in this country," he said.

Can we survive with only 175 days of school? "I'm not trying to abuse children but they will be able to learn more with more days. We need to think about how we can compete with our neighbors," he said.

Govenor Orr is recommending that beginning in the 1988-89 school year, school corporations be required to be in session 185 instructional days. Will the increased school year increase the dropout rate?

"It may well be that if a kid is going to dropout of school, he will be a dropout in society," Gov. Orr said. He added, "To eliminate ignorance you have to work at it."

Mr. John Orr, Warren Education Association representative, said, "There are very few teachers who wouldn't agree to teacher evaluation, Prime Time, and increased funding. The only real objection is the ten day extension. More doesn't necessarily make it better," he said. He added that the ten additional days would only make the "good" kids suffer.

"The Orr/Evans plan addresses neither the teacher shortage nor the disincentives to teaching," according to Warren Williams as printed in the ISTA March Advocate.

"Instead, they want to add 10 more days to Indiana's school calenders, plus eight more days for in-service training and planning time for teachers. The plan would consume $175 million of the additional $370 million they want to spend on school reform over the next two years," he added.

"Almost no one supports the idea. It's not too surprising. The plan would disrupt family routines, foul up teachers' continuing education schedules, and consume a lot of tax dollars for no instructional hours in the nation," he said.

The Orr/Evans plan calls for $400 million of new funding for kindergarten through 12th grade education over the next biennuim.

Three percent of that money would be used for administration and services such as ISTEP, Principal Leadership Academy, etc., 61 percent for existing programs such as Prime Time, Gifted and Talented, etc. Three percent would be for new programs.

"Evaluations should be in play today. When people are evaluated, they put forth more effort," Gov. Orr said.

"It is important for this to start with the people. They haven't got fired up about it. America needs to arm itself with the best possible education to enjoy life," he said.

One of the groups not fired up about the governor's plan is the Indiana Legislature. They have not yet voted on how they will or will not support his plan.

New school alternative for students

By Beth Toombs

Warren Township will be adding another school to the system for the Fall of 1987. An alternative school with the purpose of giving kids help who can't make it in a regular school is being set up.

Mr. Charles Pfluger, principal of Creston Jr. High, has been appointed as Director of Alternative School Programs.

"If they (students) are unable to make it in the system we will take time and try to help them," he said.

Right now the school has been planned for just the junior high grades 7, 8, and 9. Later on the school might move up to include the high school grades 10, 11 and possiby 12. "Right now we're setting up the criteria for the school," said Mr. Pfluger.

Mr. Pfluger said that a six-week period is the possible minimum time being considered for students to be in the school. The time spent in the school will mainly depend on how long it takes the teachers to get the students back up academically.

A total of 24 students will be in the school on a rotational basis. After their six-week period, or when they're ready, they will be worked back into the system.

"They aren't going to be labeled bad," said Mr. Pfluger about the students. There are many successful intervention programs, but there are some students who still cannot function in the schools.

These students may be bored with school, behind in their work and not getting it done, not attending school on a regular basis, or even skipping classes. They may also be limiting other students' opportunities for educational growth in the classroom.

The teachers are going to have to be very special and highly trained individuals to be able to present concentrated programs, motivate students, and have a positive impact on them. Applications have been accepted, and selections will be made in the next few weeks.

In the past, there has been no other course of action by school administrators but to expell students who have not been able to follow school rules. The alternative school will give students another chance to make it in the system.

After a year of search, the Warren Township 'School Board announced the appointment of Dr. Douglas Otto as the new superintendent beginning in the summer of 1987.

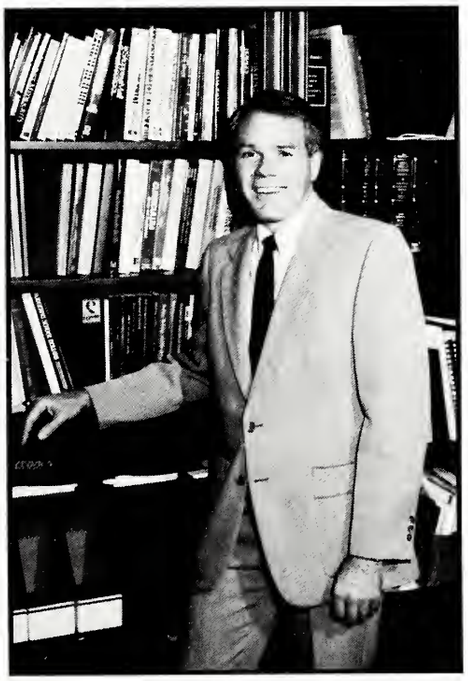
The new district head was superintendent of North Scott Community School District of Eldridge, Iowa.

In a phone conversation after his selection in April, Dr. Otto said that he was really ecstatic and gratified upon hearing of his selection.

Dr. Dan Lazear, vice-president of the Board said that Dr. Otto was the only candidate of the final five that the Board had a unanimous decision on. He also cited Dr. Otto's superior communicating skills, the high morale he instills, and his success with mproving achievement scores.

Mr. Niles Daggy, director of special education, has served as acting superintendent during the interium period.

Mr. Lazear said of the new superintendent, "He's got a terrific handle on the future of education."



Dr. Douglas Otto, Warren's new superintendent, begins his tenure with the 1987-88 school year.

Now We Know

By Yolanda Smith

t the start of each school year comes much anticipation and excitment about reuniting with friends and teachers.

This school year the faculty and student body were faced with dealing with 858 more students. The sophomore class was the biggest ever.

According to Assistant Principal Mike Copper, the number increase in student population didn't come as a big surprise to the administrtation.

"The numbers told us what was going to happen. It's not a surprise because we anticipated it for five years or so."

But what about class size? Mr. Copper said that the only problems that occurred were trying to keep classes as balanced as possible.

"Reports have shown that kids have opted to take what I call "core" classes. Enrollment has increased in math and English rather than in the elective classes," he said.

The state has added another year of math and is requiring students to take four years of English, starting with the class of 1989.

"My trigonometry class is very crowded," senior Raelyn Wilson said. She added that it prevents the class from getting individual attention.

English teacher Linda Jimison said, "the biggest difference I see is the paper load with five classes. By the end of the day, I'm exhausted and so are the students. I think it's mentally and physically unbearable. The attention span is lost."

According to Mr. Copper, there is no short term remedy for the increased class sizes. "It's a money factor. Funding prevents us from hiring more teachers."

Although the increased numbers of student population grew rapidly during the 1986-87 school year, the excitement of school days beginning remained the same.

Warren Central is one of the largest high schools in the state, and this year's sophomore class with over 800 students is one of the largest Warren has ever had.

Because of the increase in the size of the student body, there are several classes with no empty seats. Several are full, and because they are full, there are problems.

Mrs. Beth Wolff, Spanish teacher, has a fourth year class with 34 students. This is the most fourth year students she has ever had. "In a 55 minute time period, I can only ask so many questions, and with 34 students in one class, each student may only get called on twice or three times a day," she said.

Another area that is a problem in large classes is the inability of the teacher to be able to give individualized help.

"I usually don't have to wait very long to get a question answered except for sometimes during a test when everyone is spread out all over the room,"said senior Lori Couch.

Another problem is the noise level. With everybody talking at the same time, the teacher would have a very difficult time hearing.

Several activities for Mrs. Wolff's classes are set up for smaller groups, so she can't use them. "It isn't as fun playing Trivial Pursuit in Spanish when there are four teams with eight or nine players," said senior Toni Arthur.

For a fourth level Spanish class, Mrs. Wolff said that 15 to 18 students is optimal and in her second level classes around 20 or 22 are ideal. Many teachers agree that between 20 and 25 students is the best classroom situation.

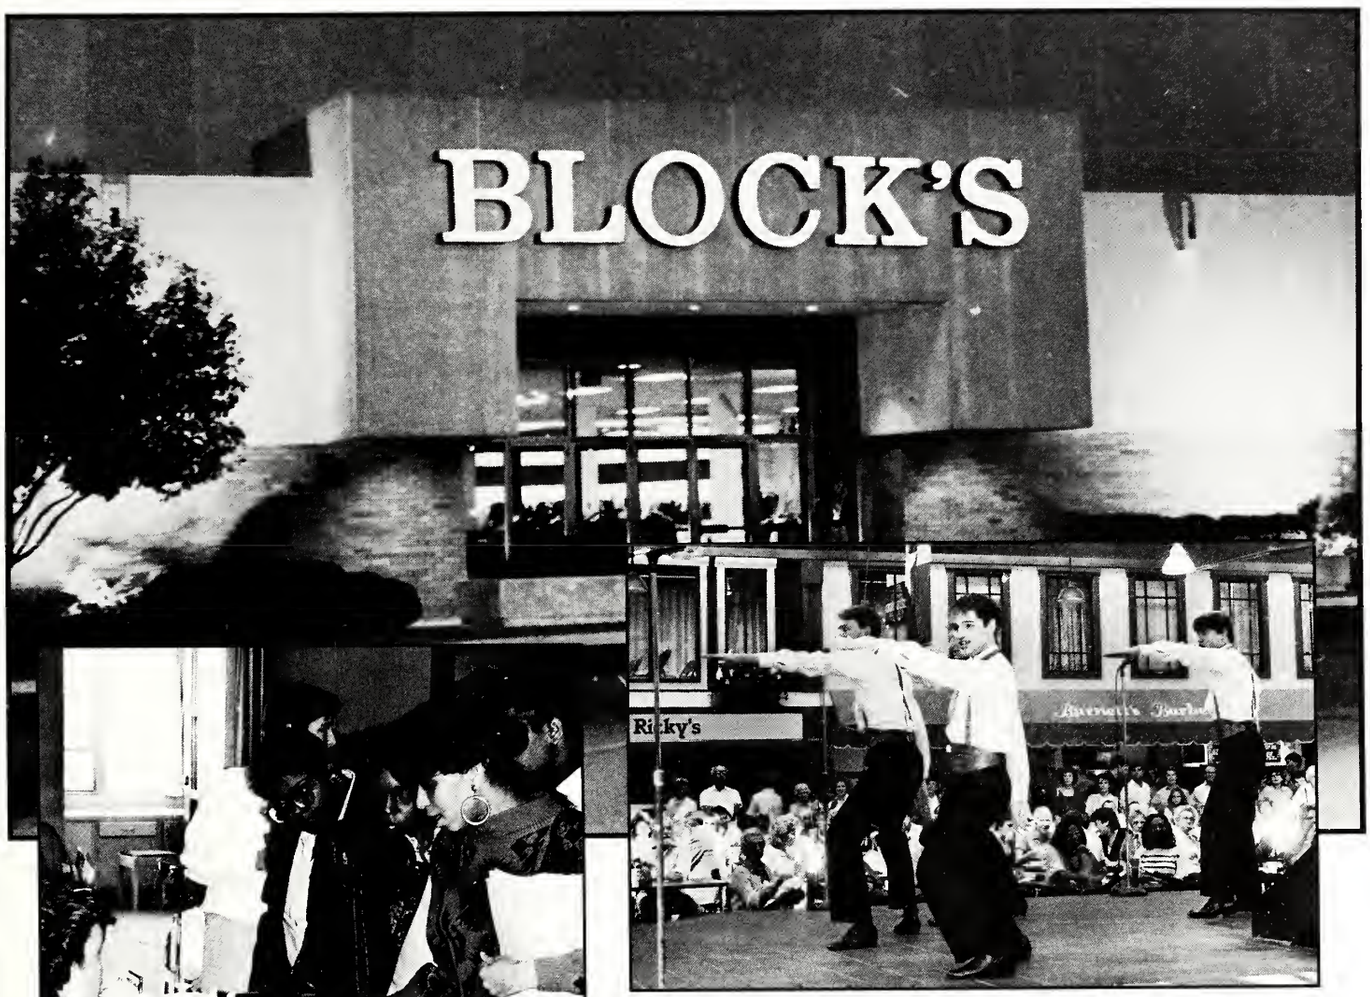
Dollars & Good Sense



Whether it was shopping at Blocks at the Mall or spending a Saturday at Union Station, students spent money and hopefully used good sense in their investments. Businesses in the community needed students both as workers and consumers. Many times those business came to school to show their support. Sometimes it was to set up a display at the Home Economics Department fair, and sometimes it was to purchase ad space in The Owl school newspaper. For those advertisers who regularly supported Warren publications, space was provided in this 1987 Wigwam. Businesses you see advertised in these next few pages showed their support with dollars and good sense.

Getting to know you...

With so many students and staff at Warren Central, one of the most important tasks was getting to know each other better.

With students coming from all parts of the eastside, this was not always easy. As the school buses rolled in front and in back of the high school and the cars poured into the parking lots, we began to get the feeling that we were not alone, that we were all in this together.

One of the first times we may have realized the job of organizing such a mass of teen bodies into a student body was the orientation convocations in the PAC, three of them to get everyone in.

Then came underclass picture time. English class by English class, kids trouped in to smile into the cameras of official photographer Ed Bowers of Tower Studio, hoping that "one shot" chance would produce a perfect picture for mom, grandma, and friends. Of course, no one "ever" liked their own picture.

To help in "finding each other," the staff has compiled this index. It is not complete because of deadlines and other problems, but it is a serious attempt to record all the faces who made up Warren Central in the school year 1986-87.

A yearbook is a history book. As long as this book exists, the world will know that you were here.

Of course, you knew it all along.

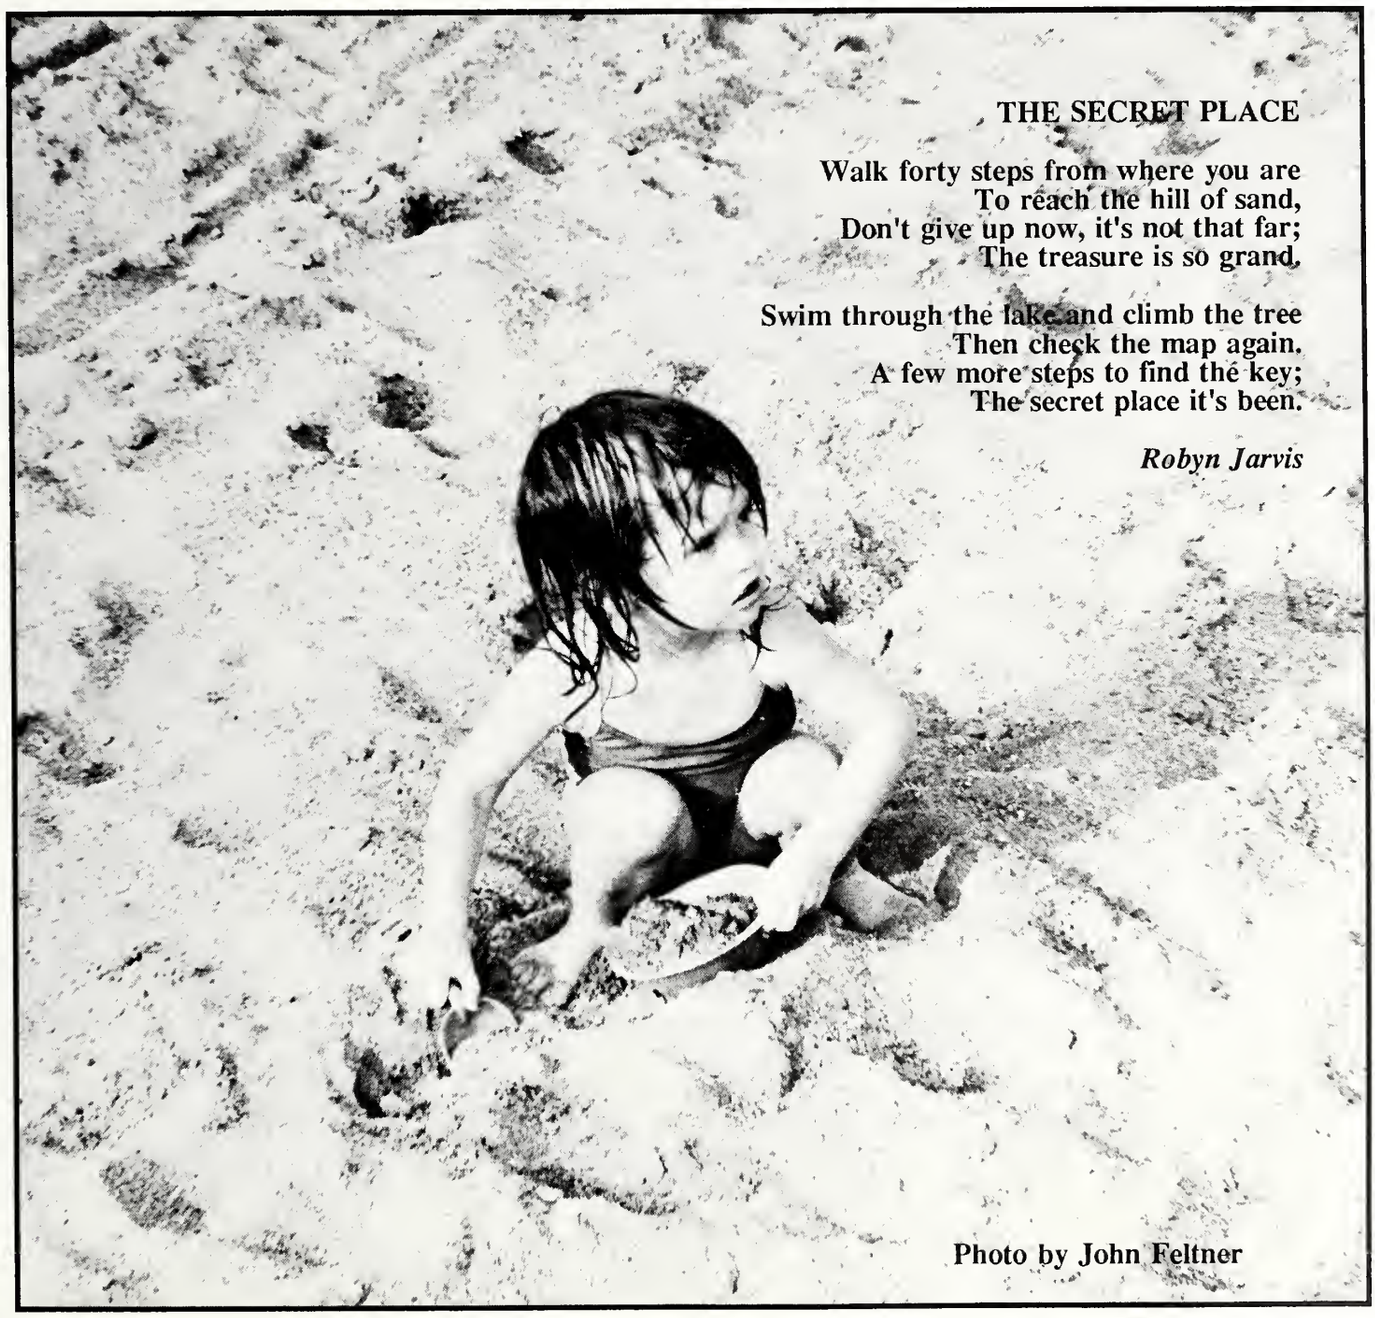
Sequoya Editor - Cari Brown



THE SECRET PLACE

Walk forty steps from where you are
To reach the hill of sand,
Don't give up now, it's not that far;
The treasure is so grand.

Swim through the lake and climb the tree
Then check the map again.
A few more steps to find the key;
The secret place it's been.

A SEVENTH OF A RAINBOW

Who has seen Green?
He hides in the depths of the sea,
Makes his presence known on the Earth's blanket.

Patron of envy and jealousy,
Representative of fresh and new,
He's a two-faced child.

Child of Yellow and Blue,
Half-brother of Orange and Purple,
Nephew of Red with whom he spends Christmas.

He celebrates his birthday every spring,
Never really getting older,
Just confirming his ever-lasting reign a ruler of the season of rebirth.

By Abby Beall

MAGIC

Read quickly the book of truth,
To revive your youth,
An impossible dream;
A wizard's touch relieves you,
A witch's spell deceives you,
Can you see what I mean?
Hear the Dragon's heart,
His breath burns the land;
To run wasn't smart,
Your castle turns to sand;
What once was a maker
Now becomes a taker;
I haven't a reason why;
When washed upon the shore
The will to fight no more,
You could almost touch the sky;
In times of old,
Life wasn't as tragic
The book unfolds,
A world filled with magic.

To toss away...

By Alisa West Williams

Sunshine streamed through the clouds as the Greyhound bus jerked to a stop. The old doors creaked open and a single man stepped onto the cracked pavement.

Bobby Canteel set his small, leather suitcase down. A warm breeze ruffled his dark brown hair. He raised one calloused hand and brushed a lock out of his deep brown eyes as he looked around him.

Bobby realized that nothing had changed in Greenbriar. Stores lined the broken sidewalks and in the distance he could hear the lonely wail of a passing train. People walked down the streets as children ran and laughed. Some of the older youths had opened a fire hydrant and splashed in the cool fountain of water.

It was a town of tradition. A town of old-time family life.

Main Street was a narrow road lined with a butcher shop, bakery, tailor shop, and a one-pump gas station. Rusted trucks and a few Ford wagons were parked along the side of the street.

Bobby picked up his suitcase and slowly made his way down to the grocery store. Budding trees marked the way, and he saw the old playground where he had spent many afternoons of his childhood. He passed the ice cream parlor and stopped to peek inside. Three tables flanked by wrought-iron chairs held teenage couples who sipped sodas and gazed shyly into each other's eyes.

He reached the store that had "Canteel's Grocery" in big, black letters above the door. A large, brass bell on the door clanged upon his arrival. From behind a dark green curtain, Bobby heard, "I'll be with ya in a minute!"

An icy shiver quivered down his spine. He knew that voice.

Suddenly, the curtain was thrown aside and a woman stepped out. Her grey hair betrayed her age, but her bright, blue eyes danced with youth. They were the same kind of eyes that Bobby had. Her ready smile froze and she saw who stood before her. Her eyes widened for a moment, then filled with tears. Without a word, she opened her arms and half ran, half stumbled to him. Bobby caught her in a bone-crushing hug that lifted her off the ground. They remained that way for a few ticks of the clock before he carefully lowered her to the floor.

"It's all right, Ma. Everything's all right now," he soothed.

"When did you get out?", she asked excitedly. "Why didn't you call? How..."

"Shhhh! It was all totally unexpected," Bobby said, "I got the news early this morning and grabbed the first bus to Greenbriar," he explained.

His mother looked at him in silence for a moment, and then, with a watery smile, she pulled him to the back of the shop. "Why, you must be starving and here I am playing faucet! Come into the back, and I'll fix you up with a huge piece of my cherry pie."

An hour later, his belly full of home cooking, Bobby sat back in his chair and gave a long sigh of satisfaction. "Boy, did that ever taste good! I sure missed your cooking.."

Ma laughed. "I would think so! I've heard of the food they serve in...," she quickly broke off as her face paled slightly.

"Don't worry, Ma. It's over, but I'll never forget it. I learned a hard lesson over the past seventeen years. People complain of being lonely, but you're never really alone until you're in prison," Bobby said quietly, thoughtfully.

"You've changed, haven't you?" his mother asked softly.

Bobby considered her words for a moment. "Yeah, I guess I have a little. Well, if you don't mind, I'm going to take a walk and work off all of that good food."

Tentatively, his mother extended the jacket and, after a minute, his hand rose to take it. As he felt the weight of it, he saw in his mind's eye the last time he had worn it. It had been on the long bus ride to Mondale Prison. Once inside, it had been stripped from him -- like a shield taken away, leaving him defenseless. Slowly, he shrugged it onto his wide shoulders. It felt strange, as if it belonged to someone else -- as if it didn't fit anymore.

He shook his head. "No, I'm still the same," he thought. "Thanks, Ma," he said simply.

Bobby nodded, kissed her on the forehead, and walked out the door.

Outside, he paused, 'Where to go?' He decided to just wander. He saw his old school, the park, and familiar hangouts. The lamp post on the corner of Delmar and Wricker that had seen many fights broken up, friendships made, and lovers' strolls. It all looked the same and yet different, like the feeling of deja vu one gets at times.

Suddenly, he stopped cold. His footsteps had taken him five blocks away to a place that tugged at his heart -- the old, abandoned house beside the junkyard. The old metal fence that surrounded the yard was rusted and broken. Holes were ripped in it and a sign that read "No Trespassing" lay on the ground.

This had been their hide out. His, Danny's and Vince's. His old gang. It had been that gang that sent him to prison. They had terrorized this town all of their teen years. Only, by the time they were seventeen, it wasn't enough to scare old ladies and break an occasional window. They needed something more. The need for power and violence was a hunger that had frightened him but had only seemed to grow stronger each day. Being one of the poorer families hadn't helped. They were looked down upon. The townspeople considered them scum and beneath their notice. Then, one day, the hunger went out of control.

He and his buddies ran out of beer one Friday night. All of them were broke, and they really wanted that beer. So, after a quick discussion, a plan was made. The Greenbriar Bank on 10th and Elm had only one teller on weekends. It would be so easy to get the money and run. They pulled on red, brown and blue striped stocking caps and taking one pocket knife, an eight inch Bowie knife, and the single 38 Caliber rifle, went down to the bank.

They slinked quietly through the door as the young, male teller's head was turned. They had planned to only take a few hundred, but when they saw all the cash in the drawer and the terrified trembling of the teller, it was if they went wild. The rage they all felt towards the town, the feeling of never being in control of their own lives, sent them over the edge. Now, it was time to get back at them, to show that they could take control...that they were the ones that had the power to dictate and command.

Danny took all the money while Vince trashed the whole area by throwing papers around and overturning desks and chairs. Bobby stood with the rifle pressing into the bank teller's throat. Sweat gleamed on the man's forehead, and he swallowed noisily. Bobby's lips rose in twisted sneer as he slowly cocked the gun. The teller's eyes widened, and he began to shake violently.

"You...you'll never get away with this...you scum! You'll get caught and then you'll pay," he said, in a squeaky voice.

Once again, Bobby heard in his mind the taunts and insults that had been heaped upon him from birth. His eyes blazed with hate.

"No one has the right to say that! No one!" he raged.

Then he pulled the trigger. The explosion that followed seemed to deafen him for a moment, and, as if in slow motion, he saw the teller's head explode.

Blood rained down on the floor, cabinet, and even Bobby. Time seemed to stand still.

Danny and Vince whirled around in surprise at the shot. They stared in disbelief at the smoking rifle and Bobby's finger on the trigger. Bobby had always been the last to use physical abuse. He had even protested a few times when they had harrassed the older people in town. Never had they thought to see him actually kill.

Then, they ran. Long and hard, back to the hideout. They had celebrated then, yelling and jumping around like idiots. They threw all the money up in the air, laughed and punched each other on the back and shoulders. They were on a high that came from taking a giant risk and surviving, like leaping off a cliff only to find that you could walk on air. No one mentioned the shooting. It was as if they realized that they had gone berserk. No one wanted to admit that for a single minute, they hadn't been in control of things the way they wanted to be. But, for the moment, they were triumphant. It wasn't until the next day that tragedy hit.

It seemed that a woman who had passed by the bank had recognized the emblem on Bobby's jacket. The silver skull with a cross embedded in the hollow eye socket. The police arrived at the grocery store and arrested him. He was scared -- horrified. When asked who had helped him, he remained silent, certain that his friends -- his loyal friends -- would back him up, give him an alibi.

He was wrong. As the police handcuffed him and led him to the waiting squad car, he saw that the entire town had shown up to see the event, and standing among the crowd, were Danny and Vince.

As he saw them, he felt hope, and looked them straight in the eye. They stared at one another for a second, and then Danny and Vlince turned and walked away. Bobby was struck dumb. He couldn't believe that his buddies had left him for dead -- to rot in a cold, damp prison cell.

Bobby shook himself. That has been seventeen years ago. It was all over now, except one thing. He had to avenge himself, had to make Danny and Vince pay for their betrayal. Bobby turned and slowly made his way back home. He paused at the gas station to get a Coke, and as he sipped at the bottle, he heard laughter. Turning his head, Bobby saw two men walking up the street towards him. One was wearing a leather studded vest that hung from his tall frame. Torn jeans covered his long, thin legs and he worn a stained, red headband. The other wore an old army jacket that seemed too small for his short, stocky build, and holey coveralls. Both were unshaven and ragged looking, and yet both had on a pair of shiny, expensive looking cowboy boots. It was Vince and Danny. They jostled and poked one another and as they came closer, Bobby could hear what they were saying.

"Man, did you see that guy's face?" Vince grinned. "I thought he was going to have a stroke!"

"Yeah, it sure was nice of him to give us these neat boots, wasn't?" Danny replied with a snicker.

They continued to talk and were now only fifteen feet from Bobby. He couldn't believe it. They were still stealing and cheating. They hadn't changed at all.

Without thinking, Bobby stepped out into their path. Vince was the first to look up. He stopped dead in his tracks when he saw who stood there. Danny glanced at Vince questioningly before looking up. His mouth dropped open and all three stared at one another...stared as they had that one day, seventeen years before. Danny was the first to find his voice.

"Bobby! Where'd you come from? Hey, it's great to see ya!" he exclaimed and yet his eyes shifted nervously.

"I was released this morning," Bobby said with deadly quiet.

"Really?" Vince chimed in. "Hey, that's great!" he said shakenly as he licked his suddenly dry lips.

"Yeah. How about the three of us going over to the store and grabbing some beer? Talk things over like old times?" Bobby smiled pleasantly, as he tossed the empty Coke bottle aside.

Vince and Danny looked at one another with surprise. Their eyes said, where was the anger? The rage?

"Well, uh, sure Bobby. That would be fine," Danny replied tentatively.

Bobby nodded and then turned and began to walk home, leaving the others to follow. Danny asked Bobby questions about how he was doing, and what was going on, but soon fell silent from Bobby's monotone replies.

They reached the grocery store and walked in.

"Bobby? Are you home dear?" his mother called from upstairs.

"Yeah. Hey, Ma, why don't you unpack for me," Bobby said.

"Well, sure, hon. It won't take but a jiffy," she said sweetly.

"Take your time," Bobby called back.

Bobby, Danny and Vince passed through the curtain and were soon sitting around the table, drinking beers.

Bobby gazed down at this can of beer and began to speak. "Ya know, it's funny how much trouble beer can cause."

Danny laughed nervously. "It sure can! I remember getting really strung out on Bud before," he agreed.

There was silence for a moment, and then Bobby rose to his feet.

"Speaking of memories, there's something I wanta to show you guys," he said, and walked into a small room off the hall.

"I always wondered what you guys were doing while I was in prison. I used to lay awake at night imagining you out here. All free and without chains," Bobby's voice echoed off the walls.

Danny and Vince began to rise from the table, but before they could take a step, Bobby walked back in from the hall and stood in front of them with a rifle aimed at their chests.

"See? It's the one we used at the bank. Remember?" Bobby asked as he poked it at the guys.

"Yeah, sure, Bobby, we remember. You don't think we left you there on purpose did you? We...we just didn't see how we could hellp you. You do understand, don't you?" Danny pleaded brokenly.

"Oh, I understand. I understand that you should have gone with me. Not me alone?" Bobby snarled.

Bobby raised the gun, aimed, and said, "I've waited a long time for this. Finally, I'll have my revenge for the seventeen years of my life you've wasted!" Bobby's finger began to tighten on the trigger and Danny dropped to his knees.

"Please, please, Bobby. We didn't mean to flake out on you. We were scared man! Please don't kill me. Vince...it was Vince's idea to not talk. Take him!" Danny begged. Tears filled his eyes and ran down his stubbly cheeks.

Vince stared in horror. "It was your idea!" he screamed hysterically. "You've got to believe me, Bobby! he groveled. "It wasn't me!"

Bobby's finger tightened more and then suddenly relaxed. After a second, he lowered the gun. He looked at Danny and Vince kneeling at his feet. All the anger and hatred were gone. It was like his mom had said. He had changed. Then, Bobby turned and walked out.

He strode straight out of the store and down the street to the abandoned building. Once there, he stopped. Looking down at the rifle still in his hand, he slowly squeezed the trigger. An empty click seemed to boom in the still air. Seventeen years ago, the gun would have been loaded and he would have killed Danny and Vince, but not now. Not ever again.

He tossed the gun onto a junkpile and removed his jacket. He held it in his hand for a second before it joined the gun. He didn't need it. Bobby turned and began to slowly walk away. The jacket was gone. It didn't fit anymore.

RAG DOLL

She listened to my every word with closed eyes
She pondered.
Deep inside her soul.
She drank from a tiny tea cup
Her parted lips sipped wine made from dandelions
Little arms held her and wiped her porcelain skin
Every little trouble with its own tear disappeared
As it reached her tiny ear
Intently she cared.
For we both fought that big, cruel world.
Me and my rag doll.

WHERE DOLPHINS PLAY

Wouldn't you like to steal away
to the land where dolphins play

Sailing upon an ivory feather young and free and so together

Under the sun, hand in hand lying upon the sweating sand

holding keys to deep-sea graves

Wouldn't you like to steal away
to the land where flowers stay

A place where unicorns white run free and peace as far as the eye can see

Gazing at stars of a silent eve
a dimension my soul could leave

Forever gazing into your eyes sharing wine 'till the new sunrise

Wouldn't you like to steal away
to the land where stars shine night and day

A place far from the world of death only the sound of your warm breath

Feeling the song of a savage kiss
under the rage of a falling mist

Oh, don't you wish that we could stay in this land where dolphins play?

On the Beach

I love to be out on the beach at night,
To watch the stars and moon shining so bright,
To feel the crisp, cool breeze upon my face,
And watch the waves flow by so full of grace.

I'll dream of where I'll be:
To be out on the shore and sit and watch the sea.

A Whisper of a Mist

The shower is just a whisper of a mist,
The earth will now be fresh and full of bliss.
And yet a dense, cold fog soon will arrive.
Nature does change with a quick and utter twist.

Painted with blues of the prettiest hue.
Children will squeal with happiest delight,
Playing so sweet just like we used to do.

Pets will be taken to lush parks for walks,
Grownups will sit on benches and have talks.
Not seen a single cloud in the clear sky,
Birds by the hundreds, but one lonely hawk.

But as for me in my quaint, cozy room,
I dare not listen to the thunder's boom,
I'll stay inside and dream of a tomorrow
When there will not be rain or nature's sorrow.

Woodstock has died

Behind the pearly gates, we're created by one.
A place of tranquility, peace and harmony.
The entrance is you; you hold the key.
The gates are guarded
by axemen past.
Hendrix and Rhodes have rested at last.
Thunder in the east is created by two.
Bonham and Scott upon concrete slates.
So when you pass, reach for the key.
For this is your home,
Woodstock has died.

I'd tell you my thoughts
But what would it mean
Why discuss life
When there's nothing between Caught in a lie
There's no way out
You've already forget
What life's really about Conservative view or Liberal Scream
Morality rule or a Communist dream
Life after death
The final frontier
Into the light
The final fear

And the lake is still there...

By Jenny Lathrop

An essay written after reading Ernest Hemingway's "In a Far Country."

In the summer the cottage at Sylvan Lake was always there, but I did not go to it anymore. It was warm at the lake and the night came very late. It was very peaceful at the cottage. Our family and my grandparents were especially close there. The sunrises against the water were so beautiful. It was breathtaking. Fishing was a source of tension relief. The church was very solemn. Most of all, it was my grandfather that made it so beautiful.

We used to spend lengths of time at the cottage. It was almost better than our summer vacations. It was my grandfather's "peace place." We all did our best thinking there. The routine day started with an early breadfast. After this, my grandfather would take my sisters and I out on the pontoon boat to teach us the love of fishing. He was patient with us. Even once when I lost his brand new pole to the lake, he just smiled and said, "You'll do better." By the time we returned to the cottage, it was time for grandpa to learn from us. We would next take out the ski boat and my grandpa would watch us ski. He would then let us drive the boat. Cruising across the water with the wind blowing your hair gave a true sense of accomplishment.

Sundays were the best times of all. We all went to church together. All of us together brought so much self content and peace. It left a good feeling in your heart. After church, my dad and grandfather made a big breakfast. After this, it became another day of skiing in the sun. It was a wonderful life.

The last time we were at the cottage, grandpa was very sick. I strongly remember painfully watching him stuggle as he walked through the church. He even had trouble walking with his walker. My grandma said this might be the last time he would be here. This really scared me. Yet I believed it would never happen. After a couple of days, he was too sick to stay. We took him home where he re-entered the hospital. As the cancer took over his body, my grandma said all we had left was prayer. I prayed numerous times each day. Months later, he passed away. I do not know where he obtained the strength to carry on. I always understood cancer to be the worst disease to suffer from. Now I realize it didn't matter. If my grandpa would have died of leukemia, heart problems, or even other causes, he would have still died the same fighter.

And the lake is still there, but I do not go to it anymore.

CONCLUDING CALCULATIONS

It was a cold winter morning, a day without light;
a peer through an iced pane, the future not bright..
Amongst it all one could seek no laughter;
it was an odd morning, 'twas the morning after.
A stay in seclusion is where one shall be found;
with the presence of no one, and nothing around.
Suddenly, one misses what is not there -
the birds, the trees, the smell of fresh air.
Caught between the past and now, how could one be so blind;
it is all but a state, a state of the mind.
Now we are back deciding where to go;
then suddenly again it begins to snow.

Love,
In an unloved heart,
Is like ice,
On a summer day,
It melts,
and slowly fades away...

Father

April twenty third nineteen eighty three.
That day, in my mind should never even be.
Losing a loved one, losing your dad
Clinging to the good things that you never had.
Remembering the things that I could never say
And hating myself to this very day

If I had one day with him again
I'd express my feelings and secret sin.

Respect your parent; hold them close inside
Tell them you love them and do it with pride.

The Zoo

Born in the hay
Cold bars stare within Cubs at play
As the people are watching

Cage after cage and all the same
Not quite grasping why
They pace impatiently from the pain of growth
Eyeballs rolling back at the spectators

A small boy points at the Kodiak
Its bristling muscles swell under its fur
Jaws of power - cracking bone
Eyes vacant of realistic contemplation
Just a day of basking in the sun
Time for antics and applause now and again
A slobbery grin and into the pool
A small boy turns away wondering

Sloping grassland ornamented with tussocks of green
Enter the master of his pride
A mane tossed majestically in a wind of sovereignty
Gargantuan paws set the agenda
The she-lions pace and stalk in faith
Revered as the epitome of honor
Heads held high on shoulders of brutality
A small boy stands mesmerized

A din of youthful prank
Spider-eating primates swinging effortlessly
Gibbons hanging from olympic rafters staring back
As baboons follow the leader laughing and screaming
Ignorant to what lies beyond the bar
An orangutuan disregards the concrete as abstract
One chimpanzee grips the iron crying for all
As a small boy reaches out in empathy

Gritty sand and dead wood
Under a rock lies Prevaricator Supreme Coiled in the pose of a trustworthy lie
A fang for you and a fang for another
Cold, yellow slits beaming from Hell
No time to think about the price of beans
Listen to its lullaby
A small boy digs his fingernails into his leg

Clamorous offertoriums raised to the moon
A breeze of longing desire
Blows the tawny northern hunters
Into a frenzy of barking welps
Drooling muzzles awaiting the throat
Cold, grey eyes of snow
Wild, canis lupis ears turned to the wind
A small boy wipes his mouth with his coat sleeve

Stretched legs behind, gliding hooves in front
Soft, short pelt of burning amber
Geometrical feats of grace suspended in the air
Horns helf even keeled as they dance
Movements made of gold and silver
Elegant creatures of a cast
Thompson's troop dashes awy in a flash of timidity
A small boy's eyes smile

Soaring in a sky of limit
Feathered explorers seeking passage
Telescopic eyes focus on the wire
A beak as hard as stone is useless to a tee
Golden crested innovator gliding high
Out of the claw and barrel
Cloudy lofts where golden aeries lie
A small boy stands up straight staring into a blur of sunshine

The cage is small and shady
One lone trunk of death stands within Upon its arm rests the owl
Fear is unknown to him for he has seen past it
Calmly rotating his head in collection of data
Never a moment of recreation, only retrospection
Logs to be signed and journals to be written
A small boy sheepishly steps away from the rail

One day the bars might melt away
Unlocked doors and open skies
First, a test of your constitution and sanity
Resulting in either an independent cosmopolitan or a paranoid lunatic

Died in the cage
Cold eyes glaring about
Alone at the last page
As the people are walking out

PARENTING:

The Best of Times
The Worst of Times

By Andy J. Lynch

It is three o'clock in the morning. A shrill cry awakens two otherwise sane and intelligent people. One nudges the other, and the second rolls out of bed onto the floor. He/She crawls into their six-month-old infant's room to carry out a labor of love.

Ten years later, mother and father are sitting in the front row of the Little League bleachers. They are listening to the cheers of encouragement from the other parents as "Mom and Dad's Little Slugger" approaches the plate. Ten more years pass and "Little Slugger" is getting married. Proud Papa is gleaming. Mom has a slight tear forming in her eye. 'Thanks Mom and Dad! For everything!" says their one-time baby. Raising a child is not quite this easy. Too rosy a picture may have been painted. Parenting is a rough mixture of nurturing the infant, building little league-type memories and acting out a supportive role through adolescence. Raising a child is work, but it can be rewarding work, if done well.

During the very early years(five and below) raising a child may seem to be just providing the necessities. On the contrary, for during these important years essential traits should be instilled in the child. Trust and honesty are remarkable sound cornerstones in which to build a future relationship. "There are no monsters in your closet; trust me and go to sleep." When the child awakes the next morning - alive - a small step has been taken in earning the trust of that child. The same can be said for honesty; simple dialogue and action may bring about the meaning of a valuable lesson into a child's thoughts.

"Did you eat an extra cookie?"

"No, Daddy," Then a slight slap on the rear.

"Did you eat an extra cookie?"

"No, Daddy." A bit firmer slap on the rear.

"Did you eat the extra cookie, dear?"

"Yes, I did."

"I thought so, young lady." A stern, disapproving look follows but no slap. A child will recognize the difference in reaction. Parents must not only say these things, but set an example for the wide-eyed youngster as well.

When a child beings to mature and is able to take on more challenging tasks, these tasks should, then, be given to him/her. The first time a son or daughter does the dishes or cuts the lawn by him or herself it can be a nice memory. Also, the parents are giving back some trust, and the child usually feels this. One must be careful, though. There is a difference between giving responsibilities and working a child near to death. This is a time to build the fun-loving memories of youth, also. Everyone has ideas of when a pleasant recollection is made. An ice cream cone in the big city. A quiet picnic in the country. These and others will provide the child with a stable, loving base in which to build the sometimes rocky relationship of adolescence.

The relationship that has been strengthened, hopefully, over the first twelve or thirteen years is put to the test during adolescence. The teenagers are pulling away; they want privacy. The parents do not want their children to grow up too fast or make the same mistakes they made. There are no simple answers to the questions a son or daughter may ask. The teenager can now think and live(except for material needs: money, food, clothes) for the most part, very much on his or her own. At this time, the parents must be patient and understanding. At this time, it is the quantity of work that goes into raising a young man or woman well that is lowered while the quality becomes more demanding than in the past.

Basically, to be a good parent one should first be a good person. Not everyone makes a good parent, and that is why it is traditionally done in pairs, perhaps. When the son or daughter in the beginning of this paper thanked his/her parents for 'everything', he/she was exactly right. Any other word would fall short of what a child should thank good parents for. This is, admittedly, a simplistic guide to the art of parenting, but the mysteries in which we have each played at least one part will not be unraveled here and now.

We knew the end would come

From the first day of school, we knew the end would come - some day when were were all bigger and older.

There would be that day when we would not get on the school bus, when we would not bring mom home our good papers and hide the bad ones, when we would drag ourselves to that dreaded required class, when we would meet our friends for lunch in the cafeteria and complain about the food even though we ate it and sometimes wanted more, when we would wait by the locker for a "special" friend.

The end would come. And it did.

In just a few oh-so-short days, we honored, we laughed, we danced, we cried, we shouted for joy.

The Class of '87 made it, at least most of us.

And when the the last words were said and the tassels tossed at Market Square Arena, we looked for mom or dad or someone special and said in our own way "I knew I could do it all along."

The sign on the hat said it all for the Class of 1987. They made it, in a graduation first at Market Square Arena.

A $400 evening lasts forever

These are the best times of your life!

They've really got to be kidding. We do not have much money, we have homework every night, tests every week; we do not have our own apartments...but, if we are lucky we will have something to remember and tell our children about - commencement at Market Square Arena, the senior dinner, Senior Olympics, and THE PROM.

From a girl's point of view, the night of the prom could be considered the most important night of her high school career. But from her pocketbook's view, it could be considered the most expensive.

First things being first, a dress is needed. This cannot be an ordinary dress. It has to be the "perfect" dress, and it could cost between $100 to $300. It also required hours of trying on every dress in every mall in town. When the final purchase was made, the hope was that you would not see the same dress on another girl. Tragedy.

Accessories, small as they may seem, can add up and so does the price. Some items included in this area are jewelry($30), purses($10), stockings($5), gloves($15), make-up($10), and maybe a new hairstyle($15).

This night must be special for a girl to spend so much. Senior Elizabeth Floyd said, "I think everyone should go to the prom once and experience it, because it they don't they'll wish they had."

This year's prom was held in the school cafeteria, and many girls wondered just how romantic the cafeteria could actually be. After all, doesn't it all go together - a fancy $50 dinner with a sleek limousine ride to...the school cafeteria? Yet, the cafeteria proved an excellent place to have the prom, decorated in peach and ivory, colors most girls like, with twinkling lights, bridges, plants and flowering trees.

Thought the prom was in the cafeteria and most girls paid over $150 for the evening, all the expense and trouble may have been worth asking that special "him" to the prom, the evening of your life.

Boys say prom costs worth it

"Let's see...gray tuxedo...pink tie...shoes... Okay, I'm ready to knock them dead." Thoughts like these were quite common for those lucky fellows who were able to attend the 1987 prom "Love Is Forever."

Those who went had both good times and some bad complications as far as before and during the prom.

Charles Golliday, junior, spent an estimated $80 to $90 for prom night. Funds included tux, tickets, dinner, corsage, limousine, and other accessories. Golliday said that the decorations for the prom were quite nice, but the music, which was supplied by a group called 10:01, could have been better.

Another junior, Kenny Jones, said he spent an estimated $300 on his prom night accessories. Jones said he couldn't believe the decorations, and also said that the foyer and cafeteria didn't look like the same place he left the last Friday. He also said his entire prom night was "fantastic."

Senior Neil Bagadiong had only one complication. His tuxedo shirt was too small; he proceeded to return it to Sheffington's. Bagadiong said he spent about $120 for his entire prom night. He also felt that the prom was nicer than last year's prom. Helping with the decorations, Bagadiong said the cafeteria didn't look like a cafeteria at all. "The entire night was great, a very special night for me."

For some, the prom cost a lot of money to prepare for; however, for others it cost little. It was a very special night for everyone, and most of the guys" knocked them dead." By Montel Thompson

Getting closer, this couple solves the height difference with an unusual tactic, a chair.

Enjoying the band, couples dance to a heavier beat of 10:01.

The cries could be heard echoing throughout the thinning halls. Wound up and celebrating the last few days of high school, the seniors had their own week of fun. The week had been eagerly awaited for 12 years. It seemed as if it would never arrive, but they always knew it would.

The week started off with the traditional dress-up days. New ideas, such as clone day (dress like anyone you choose) and kids day (try to remember how you used to dress in elementary school), gave seniors an extra reason to stand out from the norm. "I don't know anyone else who participated," said senior Mike Nelson, whom people saw as double on clone day.

"Dress-up days were only announced once," he added.

Although 'announcing' was not a big part of the dress-up days, it played a major role at the Senior Banquet. At this farewell dinner, the Senior Most Likely awards were given out.

Unfortunately one unplanned event, the painting of a side of the school, put a slight damper on things. Since this was not the first time this year that school property had been vandalized, the Senior Olympics were threatened not to happen. However, all that begins well, ends well, and the Olympics went ahead as scheduled.

Of course, high school would never be complete without the Senior Olympics. This year's events included shaving cream, a human wheelbarrel race, shaving cream, an obstacle course, shaving cream, a tricyle race, shaving cream, and more shaving cream. Unlike past years, the Olympics were held in the morning on the day before graduation. However, this did not stop many of the determined seniors from participating in the annual Shaving Cream Ball.

So, with shaving cream and squirt guns in tow, the seniors bid farewell to the underclassmen. As they raced out of the parking lot for the last time, their happiness and laughter could be heard. After 12 long years, they were out! (and the underclassmen still had five and one-half days left!) - by Tracey Beard

Plenty of food was provided for the dinner which almost didn't happen because of short ticket sales.

Fun but sad, as good friends gather for one of the last times before graduation.

Last class activity

The long student-crammed hallways might be missed. The morning announcements might be missed. The computer-processed report cards might be missed. The radio station, newspaper, Homecoming, prom, Boys' Beauty Contest, library buzzer, pep rallys, and cafeteria all might be missed. Strange things like these might make most people ask, "Who in the world could possibly miss all of that stuff?" Yet, the seniors might actually have started missing these things at their last class activity, graduation.

Though the date on the commencement program was wrong, most of the seniors knew that they had accomplished all their high school requirements by Graduation Night, May 20, 1987. Through the two-and-a-half-hour ceremony, all 724 Seniors went through commencement on that Wednesday night.

At the beginning of the year, there seemed to be a quiet panic among seniors and administrators as where to hold the commencement exercises. The State Fair Coliseum had already been leased for something other than Warren's graduation. The Hoosier Dome seemed like an impossibility to hold a graduation. All 724 Seniors probably could have fit between the two 40-yard lines with their parents lined up on the 50-yard line. Not to fear though, the administration managed to contract the lower half of Market Square Arena for the ceremony. No one could actually believe that this was the first year the graduation would not smell like cattle, but possibly sweaty socks. (cont. page 221)

Time for tassel turning

For the graduating class, the floor was small and the room filled with family and friends, but nothing could be compared to the feeling of finding a parent, brother, sister, friend, aunt, uncle, grand-parent, cousin, or guardian in the midst of the entire arena. With all the people gazing down on the graduating class, three classmates gave their fellow class members a speech to say good-bye and good luck to the friends with whom they had spent the last 3 years. With practice and guidance given by Mrs. Susan Bravard, Dawn Apple, Jennifer Koehler, and Kevin Patterson knew that they were ready (and nervous) to say farewell to school years and friends at Warren Central.

Not only were speeches read, but the orchestra played, and Mr. Phil Dunn sang the "Star Spangeled Banner." Senior orchestra members knew that this would be a performance that they would not forget. It was a night to honor the seniors, and that they did. Askren Scholars were announced along with the Honor Society members. These were the students who excelled in the academics, extracurricular activities, and community service. All of their hard work and dedication paid off on graduation night.

Finally it was time to switch the tassels, and the seniors were more than ready. With those victory-filled words given by Acting Superintendent Niles Daggy, "I declare...", the seniors had officially graduated. Though many a tear may have been shed, a hat tossed, a smile shown, a hug given, the Graduating Class of 1987 had long awaited this evening.

We knew we could do it

We knew it. We knew it all along. The year came and went in what seemed a blink of an eye. Though many wondered how Warren would survive with so many changes this year, students, faculty and administration proved they would succeed quite nicely. Sure, this year had some problems such as vandalism. Yet, every school has their own problems, and we knew that we would handle whatever came our way all along.

There were many new and exciting events that came our way this year. WEDM hosted the first ever Beach Bash, Winter Homecoming was a new tradition.Graduation was held in Market Square Arena, and a senior picture was taken, a another new tradition.

However, summing up the year in a few short, simple sentences seems nearly impossible. The year could be generalized and called wonderful, exciting, disappointing, tiring, or simply crazy. How can we forget the disappointment when our football team didn't make it to the State Championship or when vandals spray painted the school? How can we remember the excitement around Homecoming and the ruckus over the Variety Show? And we learned and excelled and some failed. But together we made it work.

Knowing what it takes...

Staff members knew it would take a lot of time to pull the 1987 Wigwam together. The book was printed by Herff Jones Yearbook Company in Marceline, Missouri. Many thanks go to some very special people including our very special friend and Herff Jones representative, Larry Glaze. Other friends to thank are Phyllis Kempf, our plant representative, and our friend and photographer, Ed Bower of Tower Studio.

This book is a result of many hours of dedicated work. Yet the Co-Editors, Dawn Apple and Sharon Daley, knew it would be worth every strand of patience. They were helped by Section Editors, Tracey Beard, Carl Brown, Jennifer Eley, and Jennifer Vaughn.

Chief photgrapher Steve St. John deserves much credit - especially for his Sequoya and WEDM pictures. He was helped by Uma Ellur, Jeff Gammons, A.J.Grein, Todd Taulman, and Christy Whalen. The publications staff supported each other, and they were Darlene Battles, Debbie Bradley, Linda Bresland, Heather Clark, Dawn Dunn, Nathan Fawkes, Rod Garrison, Jason Gilman, Lynne Greeley, Don Hauser, Michele Hodge, Beth Holmes, Karie Hon, Thomas Johnson, Todd Melloh, Bernie Miller, Laura Patrick, Kevin Priesthoff, Keny Robbins, Bill Seprodi, Yolanda Smith, Scott Soard, Shannon Stone, Montel Thompson, Beth Toombs, Delvan Wood, and the journalism class.

This yearbook is dedicated to Mrs. Wilma Taylor. This book is representative of her last year as the Warren Central Publication adviser. Truly devoted to the field of journalism, Mrs. Taylor always knew what the staff had to learn - how to put together a newspaper and yearbook. She knew it all along.
